Roosevelt Asks Authority Over United States Exports

President Would Rush War Goods

Suspension of Tariff Laws Would Help 'Free Movement' of Essential Factors

Message Is Given

Special Message Asks Full Power for War's Duration

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today to give him sweeping wartime power to suspend any law, particularly tariffs, found interfering with the "free movement of persons, property and information" into and out of the United States.

Asserting that speed and volume of war output have become more than ever before in our history the "primary conditions of victory," Mr. Roosevelt said in a special message:

"To achieve an all out war production effort, we must implement and supplement the steps already taken by the Congress and the President to eliminate those peace time restrictions which limit our ability to make the fullest and quickest use of the world's resources."

The President asked that he be empowered for the duration of the war to "suspend the operation of all or any such laws, in such a way as to meet new and perhaps unforeseen problems as they may arise, and on such terms as will enable the Chief Executive and government agencies to work out in detail parallel action in other countries."

Government agencies, Mr. Roosevelt said, had already removed many administrative restrictions on the movement of war goods, information and persons, but there remained "many legislative obstacles to that movement which impede and delay our war production effort."

The Chief Executive said these obstacles fell into two categories. One, he asserted, directly affected the movement in and out of the United States of material, information and persons needed for the war effort and included customs duties and the administrative supervision required by law affecting movement of persons and property at our borders and ports.

In the second category he placed laws imposing limitations on the procurement, acquisition or the use of non-American articles or the transportation of supplies in non-American bottoms.

To illustrate the second class of obstacles, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned "restrictions on the use, under construction differential subsidy contracts, of non-American materials in the construction of vessels under the merchant marine act of 1936."

The President also listed restriction on procurement of food or clothing not grown or produced in the United States, on the acquisition "for the public use, public building or public works of non-American articles; or the transportation by sea of many supplies except in vessels of the United States."

The President said he already

Mrs. Roosevelt Also Looks Over U. S. Paratroops After Royal Call

Somewhere in Southern England, Nov. 2 (AP)—After spending the night with Queen Mother Mary, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt inspected a unit of United States Parachute Troops at their base here today.

The American First Lady rolled into the reservation in an embassy car and was greeted by soldiers who quickly shouted their recognition of her.

She dined at Queen Mary's chateau in the south of England last night. Other overnight guests there included the Princess Royal, Queen Mary's daughter, and the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the latter Queen Mary's niece.

Nuzzo's Followers Select Him to Be Business Agent

Indicted and Once Ousted Nuzzo Opposes Dusing at Newburgh Voting November 15

Samuel Nuzzo of Newburgh, once ousted as business agent for Local 17, Hod Carrier's and Commen Laborers' Union, again is designated on one of two tickets which were placed in nomination Sunday afternoon to be voted upon Sunday, November 15, when an election of officers will be held at Newburgh.

Nuzzo was named by his followers as business agent, and the name of Frederick Dusing of Kerhonkson was presented as the "rank and file" candidate for business agent, to oppose Nuzzo.

Both factions presented a full ticket at the meeting Sunday afternoon held at the local municipal auditorium. Because of the fact that many of the members were working Sunday the attendance of the nomination meeting was comparatively small. Many of the members of the union work at the airport at Newburgh, or on the New York city water project and both jobs were operating Sunday.

Nuzzo, who is faced with an indictment charging embezzlement of union funds, will be brought to trial November 30, in the Supreme court.

On the "rank and file" ticket with Dusing, is Kenneth Canfield, president; Harry Baker, vice-president; Frank Jones, financial secretary; Tony Kukus, corresponding secretary; Tony Cinello, John Miller and Louis Buchholtz, members of the executive committee and Paul Osborne, Homer Crooks and Ernest Gerrard, assistant business agents.

The Nuzzo faction named beside Nuzzo, Robert Doolittle, president; Charles Dawson, vice-president; Jerry Amberosia, financial secretary; Clifford Quackenbush, corresponding secretary; Michael Del Buno, Michael Deaigilio and Pio Ambrosetti as members of the executive committee and Arthur Bilyou, Joseph Carpino and Wendell Tripp, assistant business agent.

Errol Flynn Appears For Rape Hearing

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (AP)—Errol Flynn went into a courtroom packed with feminine spectators today for a preliminary hearing on charges of the statutory rape of two minor girls.

As Flynn entered the courtroom of Municipal Judge Byron J. Walters he was served with the papers in a civil damage action for $62,500, brought against the film actor and his stand-in, Ed Fleming, by Eric Costa, who was injured in a fight last June after a party at the film star's home.

Flynn, grim-faced, was nattily clad in a dark blue suit, brown felt hat, white shirt and blue-gray tie. The district attorney's office had announced it intended to prosecute him to the limit.

Kingston's Scrap Metal Campaign Totals 870 Tons

Over Sixty-two Pounds Per Person Contributed in Kingston; Call Made for Heavy Material

The scrap metal drive in the City of Kingston made further strides toward its goal last week when 88 tons were collected. This brings the total contribution from all sources in this city to 870 tons—1,740,000 pounds—or 62 and one-seventh pounds per person in Kingston.

The house-to-house canvass in the Tenth and Eleventh wards on Saturday netted 18 tons. This represents another splendid showing by the housewives, who responded with metal materials of all varieties. In the Saturday collections, the city employes assisted by the school boys have been doing a wonderful job carting away everything placed out on the curbs.

On Saturday of this week the collections will be continued in the Eighth and Ninth wards.

Collections of heavy materials in the city have progressed to a point where it is believed that all calls have been answered. Chairman Raymond H. Rignall stated today that any business firm having heavy material to contribute may call him or any member of the committee and arrangements will be made for the collection. It is expected that a large number of business firms will contribute heavy scrap metal material in sufficient quantities to bring Kingston over the top in the next couple of weeks.

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 2 (AP)—A Royal Australian Air Force formation is based in Soviet Russia, where it is helping to protect Allied convoys to Murmansk and cooperating with the Red Air Force in hunting enemy surface raiders, Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford announced today. (This is the first disclosure that Australian fliers are in Russia. Britain last Tuesday announced that R. A. F. Coastal Command pilots and aircraft had been stationed in Russia since last summer to help United Nations convoys run the gantlet of German air and sea attacks.)

Acts of Wanton Destruction Were Committed Here

Halloween Is Marked by Malicious Destruction of Properties and Numerous Fires

Although approximately 3,000 boys, girls and other folks attended the Halloween party in the Municipal Auditorium on Saturday evening, hundreds of other children wandered the streets and committeed many acts of wanton destruction, such as breaking windows in homes smashing electric lights and cutting clothes lines in various sections of the city.

Other groups of children ranging in age from 10 to 16 years set fire to leaves in the streets, and the fire department responed to 10 alarms during the evening.

The first call was at 6:55 o'clock Saturday night when a group of children set fire to the "Ups and Downs" at the end of West Chestnut street, and from then on until 10 o'clock the fire department responded to alarms for grass and fires among piles of leaves in the streets.

Fires were started at Spring and Hudson streets, Presidents Place, Montrepose cemetery, the top of West Chester street hill, Highland avenue, near Foxhall avenue, on Pine street, two on Elmendorf street and one on East O'Reilly street.

In some cases it was reported that a group of children in costume would visit a home and after being entertained and presented with apples, candy and cookies they would leave the house and and then when the front door was closed would bombard the house with the apples.

Several windows were broken in houses in various sections of the city, and other malicious damage was done by the children.

A number of fires in piles of leaves in the street and on sidewalks was started by one youth, it was said, who was armed with a blow torch. The police made a futile search for the youth.

Fortunately no accidents were reported by the fire department in responding to the large number of calls, and none of the fire equipment was in collision with other vehicles. Considerable gas was consumed in driving the fire apparatus to the fires, and there was also the unnecessary wear and tear on the tires on the big machines.

Householders in various sections of the city reported that their clothes lines had been cut by children, whose names they were unable to ascertain. In some cases the damage to clothes lines and equipment was as much as $8 it was reported.

This Halloween but few store windows were soaped. Several street lights were bombarded by youthful vandals.

No arrests were made in the city.

Less Canned Baby Food

Directives to Boards Are for Deferment for All Needed in Vital War Industries

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt said today there had been widespread complaint that Selective Service boards were continuing to draft workers needed in war industry despite directives intended to guide them in deferring such men.

At the same time McNutt told a press conference that he had sent President Roosevelt today the long-awaited report of his management labor advisory committee on the manpower situation, opening the way for possible executive action on the question.

McNutt declined to reveal contents of the report, declaring any details must come from the President, but acknowledged that a section dealt with the question of compulsory national service.

The manpower commissioner said directives prepared to guide local draft boards in granting occupational deferment had "not been as effective as I should like to see them" and "widespread complaints still roll in that the directives are not being followed."

The U. S. Employment Service, operating under the W. M. C., McNutt said, is advising draft boards on occupational questions, and he expressed hope that this would bring about "improvement."

He reported also war plants were being urged to prepare "manning tables" showing what positions in them are considered essential in order to "provide justification for deferment of men in essential positions."

Many plants already have prepared these tables to give draft boards "a more realistic inventory" of their labor needs, and plants which have done so are "having far less difficulty over losing men to Selective Service," McNutt said.

He said he hoped a general program of preparing manning tables would be put in operation "in a week or ten days," starting with plants whose output consists 75 per cent of war materials and with utilities and railroads.

McNutt said that both labor and management had endorsed the manning table program.

The report of his labor-management committee was unanimous and "quite satisfactory" to him,

New York's Governorship Campaign Comes to End; 4 Million Votes Expected

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—A New York governorship campaign that will strengthen or destroy a 20-year Democratic rule of President Roosevelt's home state ends tonight after a week-end of personal attacks by major candidates and counter claims to victory.

More than 4,000,000 voters are expected to ballot tomorrow their choice among Republican Thomas E. Dewey, supported by Wendell Willkie; Democratic John J. Bennett, Jr., backed by state Democratic chairman James A. Farley and endorsed by President Roosevelt, and four other candidates.

The result may influence strongly selection of presidential candidates in 1944.

Windup of the five-weeks campaign brought prediction of a Dewey plurality of 600,000 from Herbert Brownell, Republican campaign manager. Bennett's election by 150,000 was forecast by Vincent Dailey, campaign manager for the Democratic State Committee, who said Bennett would carry New York city by 400,000.

Meanwhile Alex Rose, state secretary of the American Labor Party, foresaw for its candidate, Dean Alfange, a vote larger than the 410,000 with which the A.L.P. clinched Democratic Governor Lehman's defeat of Dewey in 1938.

Off-Year Balloting May Total 30 Millions

Democrats Admit Some Gains Will Be Made by G. O. P., but Not Control Strength

(By The Associated Press)

With Republicans predicting "substantial" gains and Democrats conceding them some but not enough to control, America's adult millions will pause briefly in their drive to win the war to vote tomorrow in the "off-year" elections which will determine the make-up of the 78th Congress and state administrations.

In the first wartime election since 1918, when the Republicans gained control from a Democratic Congress under Woodrow Wilson and held it for 12 years, upwards of 30,000,000 voters—light compared with former years—are expected to choose from more than 1,600 candidates, 33 senators, 432 House members, 32 governors, and a host of other state officers.

Maine held its election September 14, going Republican as expected.

Sharp reductions in registrations indicated a light vote despite appeals from party leaders, including President Roosevelt, that citizens go to the polls to demonstrate that one of the nation's most cherished privileges—the free ballot—could be preserved in war and democracy kept functioning.

In an attack on "Washington bureaucrats," Frank Gannett, assistant chairman of the Republican national committee, declared in a radio speech last night that a Republican victory would mean that "we are going to prosecute the war with more efficiency, more determination, more power, and win decisively."

Senator Thomas (D.-Utah) recalled in a statement that Woodrow Wilson lost his "program for the peace" with the election of a Republican Congress, and charged that a "powerful and insidious movement" was trying to wipe out the social gains which he said had been made by the New Deal.

Investigators Posted

It was announced meanwhile that the Senate campaign expenditures committee had posted investigators in Delaware, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, and intended to send agents to Iowa and Colorado.

The Republicans claimed they would pick up at least seven new Senate seats—six of them now held by Democrats and the seventh by the veteran independent, Norris of Nebraska. They have only 29 now, so even if their predictions come true they still would have only 36, or 12 short of a majority.

Democratic spokesmen conceded nothing in the Senate races. They said they expected to retain their present strength of 65. Republicans said their gains would come in at least seven of the following states: Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Delaware.

With 53 turnovers needed to give them House control—a majority of the House is 218—Republicans believed they would pick up at least 35 net. The Democrats, though, would not give them more than 15 new seats. The Democrats have had control of the House since 1930 when they won 219 and the Republicans 214 places. Their highest majority

Inonu Declaration May Be Warning

Turk's President May See Signs That Point to War With Axis

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

London, Nov. 2 — The grave declaration by President Ismet Inonu of Turkey that his country is nearer war than at any time since the world conflict started—from a cause he does not specify—may be taken as a warning to his people of the danger of an Axis attack and a notification to Hitler that the Turks are not asleep.

What the astute Inonu has in mind seems clear. Long ago I called attention to the likelihood that if Hitler were frustrated in his interlocking Caucasus and Egyptian campaigns, he likely would try to reach the Middle East either by attacking Turkey or through by-passing Turkey and making an assault on Syria with air and water-borne forces.

Well, frustration appears to be riding the fuehrer's shoulders like the old man of the sea. Undoubtedly he will make further desperate efforts to crack this Middle Eastern nut, for it represents his only hope of winning the war.

That certainly put Turkey on the hot spot. It would make small difference whether Hitler attacked the turks direct or bypassed them at the outset, for they could hardly avoid being involved in any event.

Of course, Turkey might have her choice of joining the Axis or the Allies, but ever since the war began all indications have been that if she had to abandon neutrality she would fight for the United Nations. That is the reason Hitler has been so careful not to antagonize the Turks but on the contrary to keep their good will.

Naturally it is problematical whether the Nazi leader could make such an attack in view of the terrific jam he is in on the Russian front. However, presumably Inonu sees signs which point to trouble.

If the Germans do attempt such an adventure it would mean that they would perform a holding operation on the Caucasus battlefront while flinging the army either at Syria or directly at Turkey.

From the standpoint of weather and perhaps of strategy, the Syrian gamble might seem more desirable if it were to be undertaken in the near future. If Hitler intends to wait until spring, then he might decide to go for the Turks.

The Nazi chief's great difficulty in attacking Syria would be to muster sufficient air strength, since that would be his chief weapon at the outset and would also provide much of his early transport. He is short of warplanes, short of pilots and short of both gasoline and oil, according to my information from a reliable source.

Moreover, he presumably will strain every nerve to send air support to Rommel in Egypt. Lack of air power is Rommel's greatest weakness.

Still, the German mind plans a long way ahead and it wouldn't be surprising to see the develop-

Seven Craft Are Sunk by Submarines

Axis Is Cut Off

Big Part of German African Force Lost to Main Army

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
(Associated Press War Editor)

Adding to its score against the Japanese imperial navy in an offensive which seems to have saved Guadalcanal, the United States Navy announced today that seven more enemy vessels had been sunk by American submarines.

Apart from these recent sinkings, the roving submarines of the Pacific fleet also damaged three Japanese ships, including a converted aircraft carrier which was left aflame.

The ships destroyed were listed as one large passenger-cargo vessel, two large tankers, two medium sized and two small cargo ships.

In addition to the aircraft carrier, the damaged ships were a destroyer and a medium-sized tanker.

The sinkings increased the total of enemy ships reported sunk or damaged in the Pacific by submarines alone, since Pearl Harbor, to 133—or 86 sunk, 20 probably sunk and 27 damaged.

For a week now the United States Navy has ruled the waters around our difficult offensive lodgement in Guadalcanal in the Solomons, not by Japanese sufferance but by virtue of the great naval-air battle of last Monday in which, it appears from current reports, we dished out about as much damage as we took.

Guadalcanal indeed may have been saved.

As against the loss of an as yet unidentified United States aircraft carrier and the destroyer Porter, along with damage to other vessels, the Americans scored damaging torpedo and bomb hits on seven large Japanese ships.

These were detailed as follows in a Sunday communique based on details received from the new naval commander for the South Pacific area, Vice Admiral William F. Halsey:

Four to six heavy bomb hits on an aircraft carrier of the Zuikaku class:

Two medium bomb hits on another aircraft carrier of the same class;

Two heavy bomb hits on a battleship of the Kongo class;

One heavy bomb hit on a second battleship;

Five medium bomb hits on a cruiser of the Tikuma class;

Torpedo and bomb hits on a heavy cruiser, and

Two torpedo hits on a heavy cruiser.

In addition, the communique said, more than 100 Japanese planes were destroyed and 50 others probably destroyed. An Associated Press dispatch from the South Pacific, moreover, quoted an American pilot who participated in the battle as saying that the flight deck of one of the Japanese carriers was completely smashed and she appeared to be sinking.

The Japanese ships were ready to join hands with counter-offensive forces already landed on Guadalcanal for an all-out assault when the United States naval force gave battle last Monday, some 200 miles northeast of Guadalcanal.

The Japanese force retired after the engagement, and the enemy's first major effort to crush the ma-

Prison Guards in Albania Fire on Group Asking Political Amnesty

Jerusalem, Nov. 2 (AP)—Prison guards at Tirana, Albania, fired on a group of girls demonstrating for the release of political prisoners recently, killing 16 and wounding 25, reliable Balkan sources reported today.

Women and students were reported taking a leading part in the insurrection movement against their Italian rulers because so many men opposing Italian rule are fighting with guerrillas in the mountains. The director of Tirana police and two guards were wounded recently by patriots, after which more than 100 persons were arrested, these informants said.

In the Saturday collections, the city employes assisted by the school boys have been doing a wonderful job carting away everything placed out on the curbs.

On Saturday of this week the collections will be continued in the Eighth and Ninth wards.

Collections of heavy materials in the city have progressed to a point where it is believed that all calls have been answered. Chairman Raymond H. Rignall stated today that any business firm having heavy material to contribute may call him or any member of the committee and arrangements will be made for the collection. It is expected that a large number of business firms will contribute heavy scrap metal material in sufficient quantities to bring Kingston over the top in the next couple of weeks.

Aussies in Russia

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 2 (AP)—A Royal Australian Air Force formation is based in Soviet Russia, where it is helping to protect Allied convoys to Murmansk and cooperating with the Red Air Force in hunting enemy surface raiders, Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford announced today. (This is the first disclosure that Australian fliers are in Russia. Britain last Tuesday announced that R. A. F. Coastal Command pilots and aircraft had been stationed in Russia since last summer to help United Nations convoys run the gantlet of German air and sea attacks.)

Acts of Wanton Destruction Were Committed Here

Halloween Is Marked by Malicious Destruction of Properties and Numerous Fires

Although approximately 3,000 boys, girls and other folks attended the Halloween party in the Municipal Auditorium on Saturday evening, hundreds of other children wandered the streets and committeed many acts of wanton destruction, such as breaking windows in homes smashing electric lights and cutting clothes lines in various sections of the city.

Other groups of children ranging in age from 10 to 16 years set fire to leaves in the streets, and the fire department responed to 10 alarms during the evening.

The first call was at 6:55 o'clock Saturday night when a group of children set fire to the "Ups and Downs", at the end of West Chestnut street, and from then on until 10 o'clock the fire department responded to alarms for grass and fires among piles of leaves in the streets.

Fires were started at Spring and Hudson streets, Presidents Place, Montrepose cemetery, the top of West Chester street hill, Highland avenue, near Foxhall avenue, on Pine street, two on Elmendorf street and one on East O'Reilly street.

In some cases it was reported that a group of children in costume would visit a home and after being entertained and presented with apples, candy and cookies they would leave the house and and then when the front door was closed would bombard the house with the apples.

Several windows were broken in houses in various sections of the city, and other malicious damage was done by the children.

A number of fires in piles of leaves in the street and on sidewalks was started by one youth, it was said, who was armed with a blow torch. The police made a futile search for the youth.

Fortunately no accidents were reported by the fire department in responding to the large number of calls, and none of the fire equipment was in collision with other vehicles. Considerable gas was consumed in driving the fire apparatus to the fires, and there was also the unnecessary wear and tear on the tires on the big machines.

Householders in various sections of the city reported that their clothes lines had been cut by children, whose names they were unable to ascertain. In some cases the damage to clothes lines and equipment was as much as $8 it was reported.

This Halloween but few store windows were soaped. Several street lights were bombarded by youthful vandals.

No arrests were made in the city.

Directives to Boards Are for Deferment for All Needed in Vital War Industries

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt said today there had been widespread complaint that Selective Service boards were continuing to draft workers needed in war industry despite directives intended to guide them in deferring such men.

At the same time McNutt told a press conference that he had sent President Roosevelt today the long-awaited report of his management labor advisory committee on the manpower situation, opening the way for possible executive action on the question.

McNutt declined to reveal contents of the report, declaring any details must come from the President, but acknowledged that a section dealt with the question of compulsory national service.

The manpower commissioner said directives prepared to guide local draft boards in granting occupational deferment had "not been as effective as I should like to see them" and "widespread complaints still roll in that the directives are not being followed."

The U. S. Employment Service, operating under the W. M. C., McNutt said, is advising draft boards on occupational questions, and he expressed hope that this would bring about "improvement."

He reported also war plants were being urged to prepare "manning tables" showing what positions in them are considered essential in order to "provide justification for deferment of men in essential positions."

Many plants already have prepared these tables to give draft boards "a more realistic inventory" of their labor needs, and plants which have done so are "having far less difficulty over losing men to Selective Service," McNutt said.

He said he hoped a general program of preparing manning tables would be put in operation "in a week or ten days," starting with plants whose output consists 75 per cent of war materials and with utilities and railroads.

McNutt said that both labor and management had endorsed the manning table program.

The report of his labor-management committee was unanimous and "quite satisfactory" to him,

Off-Year Balloting May Total 30 Millions

Democrats Admit Some Gains Will Be Made by G. O. P., but Not Control Strength

(By The Associated Press)

With Republicans predicting "substantial" gains and Democrats conceding them some but not enough to control, America's adult millions will pause briefly in their drive to win the war to vote tomorrow in the "off-year" elections which will determine the make-up of the 78th Congress and state administrations.

In the first wartime election since 1918, when the Republicans gained control from a Democratic Congress under Woodrow Wilson and held it for 12 years, upwards of 30,000,000 voters—light compared with former years—are expected to choose from more than 1,600 candidates, 33 senators, 432 House members, 32 governors, and a host of other state officers.

Maine held its election September 14, going Republican as expected.

Sharp reductions in registrations indicated a light vote despite appeals from party leaders, including President Roosevelt, that citizens go to the polls to demonstrate that one of the nation's most cherished privileges—the free ballot—could be preserved in war and democracy kept functioning.

In an attack on "Washington bureaucrats," Frank Gannett, assistant chairman of the Republican national committee, declared in a radio speech last night that a Republican victory would mean that "we are going to prosecute the war with more efficiency, more determination, more power, and win decisively."

Senator Thomas (D.-Utah) recalled in a statement that Woodrow Wilson lost his "program for the peace" with the election of a Republican Congress, and charged that a "powerful and insidious movement" was trying to wipe out the social gains which he said had been made by the New Deal.

Investigators Posted

It was announced meanwhile that the Senate campaign expenditures committee had posted investigators in Delaware, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, and intended to send agents to Iowa and Colorado.

The Republicans claimed they would pick up at least seven new Senate seats—six of them now held by Democrats and the seventh by the veteran independent, Norris of Nebraska. They have only 29 now, so even if their predictions come true they still would have only 36, or 12 short of a majority.

Democratic spokesmen conceded nothing in the Senate races. They said they expected to retain their present strength of 65. Republicans said their gains would come in at least seven of the following states: Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Delaware.

With 53 turnovers needed to give them House control—a majority of the House is 218—Republicans believed they would pick up at least 35 net. The Democrats, though, would not give them more than 15 new seats. The Democrats have had control of the House since 1930 when they won 219 and the Republicans 214 places. Their highest majority

Inonu Declaration May Be Warning

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

London, Nov. 2 — The grave declaration by President Ismet Inonu of Turkey that his country is nearer war than at any time since the world conflict started—from a cause he does not specify—may be taken as a warning to his people of the danger of an Axis attack and a notification to Hitler that the Turks are not asleep.

What the astute Inonu has in mind seems clear. Long ago I called attention to the likelihood that if Hitler were frustrated in his interlocking Caucasus and Egyptian campaigns, he likely would try to reach the Middle East either by attacking Turkey or through by-passing Turkey and making an assault on Syria with air and water-borne forces.

Well, frustration appears to be riding the fuehrer's shoulders like the old man of the sea. Undoubtedly he will make further desperate efforts to crack this Middle Eastern nut, for it represents his only hope of winning the war.

That certainly put Turkey on the hot spot. It would make small difference whether Hitler attacked the turks direct or bypassed them at the outset, for they could hardly avoid being involved in any event.

Of course, Turkey might have her choice of joining the Axis or the Allies, but ever since the war began all indications have been that if she had to abandon neutrality she would fight for the United Nations. That is the reason Hitler has been so careful not to antagonize the Turks but on the contrary to keep their good will.

Naturally it is problematical whether the Nazi leader could make such an attack in view of the terrific jam he is in on the Russian front. However, presumably Inonu sees signs which point to trouble.

If the Germans do attempt such an adventure it would mean that they would perform a holding operation on the Caucasus battlefront while flinging the army either at Syria or directly at Turkey.

From the standpoint of weather and perhaps of strategy, the Syrian gamble might seem more desirable if it were to be undertaken in the near future. If Hitler intends to wait until spring, then he might decide to go for the Turks.

The Nazi chief's great difficulty in attacking Syria would be to muster sufficient air strength, since that would be his chief weapon at the outset and would also provide much of his early transport. He is short of warplanes, short of pilots and short of both gasoline and oil, according to my information from a reliable source.

Moreover, he presumably will strain every nerve to send air support to Rommel in Egypt. Lack of air power is Rommel's greatest weakness.

Still, the German mind plans a long way ahead and it wouldn't be surprising to see the develop-

Big Part of German African Force Lost to Main Army

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
(Associated Press War Editor)

Adding to its score against the Japanese imperial navy in an offensive which seems to have saved Guadalcanal, the United States Navy announced today that seven more enemy vessels had been sunk by American submarines.

Apart from these recent sinkings, the roving submarines of the Pacific fleet also damaged three Japanese ships, including a converted aircraft carrier which was left aflame.

The ships destroyed were listed as one large passenger-cargo vessel, two large tankers, two medium sized and two small cargo ships.

In addition to the aircraft carrier, the damaged ships were a destroyer and a medium-sized tanker.

The sinkings increased the total of enemy ships reported sunk or damaged in the Pacific by submarines alone, since Pearl Harbor, to 133—or 86 sunk, 20 probably sunk and 27 damaged.

For a week now the United States Navy has ruled the waters around our difficult offensive lodgement in Guadalcanal in the Solomons, not by Japanese sufferance but by virtue of the great naval-air battle of last Monday in which, it appears from current reports, we dished out about as much damage as we took.

Guadalcanal indeed may have been saved.

As against the loss of an as yet unidentified United States aircraft carrier and the destroyer Porter, along with damage to other vessels, the Americans scored damaging torpedo and bomb hits on seven large Japanese ships.

These were detailed as follows in a Sunday communique based on details received from the new naval commander for the South Pacific area, Vice Admiral William F. Halsey:

Four to six heavy bomb hits on an aircraft carrier of the Zuikaku class;

Two medium bomb hits on another aircraft carrier of the same class;

Two heavy bomb hits on a battleship of the Kongo class;

One heavy bomb hit on a second battleship;

Five medium bomb hits on a cruiser of the Tikuma class;

Torpedo and bomb hits on a heavy cruiser, and

Two torpedo hits on a heavy cruiser.

In addition, the communique said, more than 100 Japanese planes were destroyed and 50 others probably destroyed. An Associated Press dispatch from the South Pacific, moreover, quoted an American pilot who participated in the battle as saying that the flight deck of one of the Japanese carriers was completely smashed and she appeared to be sinking.

The Japanese ships were ready to join hands with counter-offensive forces already landed on Guadalcanal for an all-out assault when the United States naval force gave battle last Monday, some 200 miles northeast of Guadalcanal.

The Japanese force retired after the engagement, and the enemy's first major effort to crush the ma-

Prison Guards in Albania Fire on Group Asking Political Amnesty

Jerusalem, Nov. 2 (AP)—Prison guards at Tirana, Albania, fired on a group of girls demonstrating for the release of political prisoners recently, killing 16 and wounding 25, reliable Balkan sources reported today.

Women and students were reported taking a leading part in the insurrection movement against their Italian rulers because so many men opposing Italian rule are fighting with guerrillas in the mountains. The director of Tirana police and two guards were wounded recently by patriots, after which more than 100 persons were arrested, these informants said.

New York's Governorship Campaign Comes to End; 4 Million Votes Expected

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—A New York governorship campaign that will strengthen or destroy a 20-year Democratic rule of President Roosevelt's home state ends tonight after a week-end of personal attacks by major candidates and counter claims to victory.

More than 4,000,000 voters are expected to ballot tomorrow their choice among Republican Thomas E. Dewey, supported by Wendell Willkie; Democratic John J. Bennett, Jr., backed by state Democratic chairman James A. Farley and endorsed by President Roosevelt, and four other candidates.

"The result may influence strongly selection of presidential candidates in 1944.

Windup of the five-weeks campaign brought prediction of a Dewey plurality of 600,000 from Herbert Brownell, Republican campaign manager. Bennett's election by 150,000 was forecast by Vincent Dailey, campaign manager for the Democratic State Committee, who said Bennett would carry New York city by 400,000.

Meanwhile Alex Rose, state secretary of the American Labor Party, foresaw for its candidate, Dean Alfange, a vote larger than the 410,000 with which the A.L.P. clinched Democratic Governor Lehman's defeat of Dewey in 1938.

Cooperation Is Called Excellent Among Services

Survey of Anglo, Canadian and American Air Stations Reveals No Friction

(Clayton Knight, who is sketching and writing about the American, Canadian and English air forces in England and Iceland, is recognized by many as this country's leading aviation artist. In our Air Forces Corps, in the last war, he engaged in many successful battles until shot down, wounded badly, behind the German lines. Tomorrow, Mr. Knight pictures the Flying Fortresses in battle and tells you about their performance and the men who are flying them.)

By CLAYTON KNIGHT
(For the Associated Press)

London—I have been in England and Iceland visiting American, British and Canadian air stations two months now and can tell you that the cooperation among the three services is excellent.

I heard and read reports of friction before leaving New York; that this was the reason why Americans at the time were not accomplishing more in the war over Europe.

I talked with brass hats. I talked with air crews. I talked with ground crews. I talked with RAF men, RCAF men, fleet air men and of course, our own men.

I flew with the British in the last war and knew that cooperation was good then. It is infinitely better this time. "Complete cooperation" are all-encompassing words, but they're the only ones that can describe the relationship between Americans, Canadians and the English.

That close relationship doesn't cease as regards the head men of each air force, either. And the same holds true for the really close relationship between the other high officers and their men.

Airmen everywhere like to talk shop. It's their business. Dinner parties, arranged as a relaxation for the men who've spent long hours on the planning of air offensives, inevitably drift into discussions about comparative methods of using aircraft in war, of various types of planes, their strength and their weakness and the best ways of training men to use them properly.

I was present at several such gatherings and many times the "tops" of each air force also attended.

Want to meet some of these leaders?

There's Major General Carl "Toouey" Spaatz, commanding the U. S. air forces in the European theatre. A veteran air fighter from the last war, he's a tough-fibered soldier whose mental arteries nevertheless haven't hardened but have remained elastic and susceptible to new ideas.

The day I dropped in on Spaatz at his headquarters outside of London. I thought it would be a good idea to take him to meet Air Marshal H. A. "Gus" Edwards, commanding officer of the RCAF in England. Edwards had been away (in Canada) and had just arrived. Spaatz was getting settled in his headquarters.

"I said, "Gus, meet Toouey." Edwards said, "hello Toouey," and Spaatz replied, "how are you, Gus." With no other formalities the two airmen immediately plunged into a conversation about planes that lasted two hours. I can't tell you exactly what they talked about without revealing too much information, but I can tell you that they were in agreement in a certain new type of plane which the Allies need to win the war.

Tough, Lean, Wiry

Spaatz is a tough, lean, wiry little man, with sandy moustache beneath a rather prominent nose, and although his sandy hair is graying, he's still a rough customer. A graduate of West Point in 1914, he learned to fly two years later. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in France in the last war, flying a Spad, and you'll often find him in the air today.

Edwards is an equally strong, forceful officer, who learned his trade the hard way. He started as a pit boy in a mine, but by studying long hours at night educated himself to rise to the top of his profession.

He flew in the last war until taken prisoner in 1917, but put even that misfortune to his own use by learning to speak, read and write German like a native. He has broadcast to the Germans in their own tongue. He has many original ideas about the future of air fighting and some of them are bound to blast the Luftwaffe.

"When the Americans want to get something done with the British," said one American General in making his report to Washington, "they see 'Gus' Edwards. He knows how to present our case to the British and get results."

Under Spaatz, heading his fighter command, is Brig. Gen. F. "Monk" Hunter, a pilot who was credited with victories over seven German planes in World War 1. An outspoken critic, during peace times, of what he considered stupid aviation tactics, he was held down until the advent of this war. Now, rightly, he commands the American fighter group.

If Hunter is Spaatz's right hand man, Brig. Gen. Ira Eaker is his equally strong left. Eaker, formerly in command of fighter groups but now directing the operations of the all-important bomber command, also has had long and sound training.

Eaker was the pilot of the famous "Question Mark" when that plane established a world's record for sustained flight by refueling in the air. Also, he was the first army pilot to fly across the United States solely by instruments, without once checking his position by visual means. When the new flying fortresses began their daylight raids on occupied France, it was Eaker who flew in the lead plane to show the boys how it should be done.

These Are Musketeers

Spaatz, Hunter, Eaker — those are the three musketeers of the American air forces in England. Their three counterparts in the RAF are Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, commanding the RAF; Air Chief Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas of the fighter command, and Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, head of the bomber command.

Each of the three Britons, besides being veterans of the last war, have had the advantage of three years of experience in this one. They have come to the top because, through all the terrific fighting during the battle of Britain, when she was outnumbered three-to-one in the air, they kept a certain flexibility of thought combined with the fixed purpose of beating the Hun.

I got something of a surprise when I visited sturdy, ruddy-faced Sholto Douglas at his headquarters in a quiet village, where he directs fighting tactics. One thinks of fighter pilots as impulsive, rushing boys, leaping into fast airplanes and going into action. Their chief give you a different feeling.

Seeing him in his office, cool and calm, gazing out over a garden where bright flowers nod in the English breeze, you are struck with the fact that despite the apparent abandon shown at a fighter station there is cold, careful planning behind each sortie, each air battle. The triumphs of the Battle of Britain begin to seem more logical when you realize that men like this have worked out the tactics beforehand.

It was on another sunny day that I drove out of the war-pocked London to lunch with the Bomber Chief, Harris. I got something of a surprise when I met him, too.

To see him there in his home in the rolling, peaceful countryside, with his lovely wife and tiny daughter—this day clad in a sun-suit and nothing else except a bandage over her small-pox inoculation — it was difficult to associate with him "a thousand night bombers" sowing seeds of destruction in western Germany. He's nicknamed "Ginger," but his hair is nearer silver. His face is unlined and he has the tapering hands of an artist.

But however much the brains and directing force behind the aerial "second front" might appear on the soft side, that idea was soon dispelled.

Motioning me into the front seat of his Bentley, he drove to his office, tooling the speeding car around dangerous turns even as he kept up a lively discourse on the relative merits of the English heavy bombers and ours.

And then in his office, while I made a sketch of him, he went about his work in a business-like way. He signed papers and made notations one after the other—some of them, no doubt, settling the fate of some row of factories in the western Rhineland. His quick, hard decisions belied his almost effete outward appearance.

Yes, both British fighter and bomber commands seem to be in most capable hands.

Ulster Men in Elks' Aviation Cadet Training

Any young man between the age of 18 to 27 with good eyes and in good physical condition, is a good prospect for the aviation cadet training which is sponsored in this section by Poughkeepsie Lodge, 275, of Elks, working in cooperation with Technical Sergeant George Miller of the Poughkeepsie Army Recruiting Office. One hundred and eleven successful candidates have been recruited since the first of the year by this organization.

Three of these young men have already secured their commissions as second lieutenants; about 50 are in training and the balance of them are waiting their turns to go. Several of those in training will receive their commissions in the next few weeks.

Candidates for the air crew training which comprises pilots, bombardiers and navigators, must pass a mental screening test. Although a high school education is not an absolute requirement, experience shows that the tests will prove difficult for those who have not completed at least four years of high school. Certain ground crew positions as officers are open to those with college education.

Aviation cadets are paid $75 a month while training, in addition to having their maintenance and insurance furnished. At the conclusion of the training, which takes six to nine months, they are rated as flying officers or second lieutenants in the Army Air Corps. Pay is about $300 a month with additional allowances for married men.

Ernest Tinklepaugh, exalted ruler of Poughkeepsie Lodge of Elks declares that "one does not have to see the Elks in order to get into the Air Corps but we are happy to aid and advise any young man who is interested. Interested persons should write or call upon the chairman of our Defense Committee, County Clerk Frederic A. Smith. He may be reached at the Court House in Poughkeepsie."

Ulster county has furnished a sizeable number of men in the new aviation cadet training which is being sponsored by the Poughkeepsie Lodge, 275 of Elks, working in cooperation with Technical Sergeant George Miller of the Poughkeepsie Army Recruiting Office. Since January 1 of this year, the organization has recruited 111 successful candidates.

Those from this city are Robert F. Schoonmaker, John A. Palmer, Arthur Fritog, Donald R. Gemmel, John J. Byrnes, Matthew Hasbrouck, Thomas L. McNierney and Robert H. Van Buren.

Highland has contributed John M. Lockhart, Edward C. Lukach, and Howard R. Cleveland while New Paltz has offered Moncure Way, Warner G. Murphy and Thomas J. Mithen.

Rosendale is represented by Donald Ten Hagen while Frank C. Carle represents Mt. Tremper.

Ohio Test Port Finds U.S. Getting Ready for Axis

(The army air forces have geared operations to a tremendously expanded war program, involving a two-year production of possibly 150,000 planes and air personnel of 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 men. To demonstrate how the A.A.F. is keeping pace with this program, together with all developments in fighting craft production calculated to increase U. S. punching power, a group of observers recently was taken behind the scenes at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, the chief experimental and test station.)

By ALAN J. GOULD

Wright Field, Dayton, O., Nov. 2 (AP)—Three hours from Broadway's dimout, as the army cargo ship flies, you arrive in the midst of projects and preparations to turn all hell loose in the current and coming war of the air.

It seems peaceful enough as you look over a vacant golf course from the rambling brick home of the commandant, Brig. Gen. Arthur Vanaman, who was American air attache in Berlin four years and knows all about Nazi air strength. It's a concentrated close-up of destructive power as you observe what the army air forces are doing in their great testing and experimental laboratory, under the instructive guidance of Maj. Gen. Oliver Echols, head of the material command.

Take, just for example, a night demonstration of fire power staged for our benefit. Lined up in a row facing the firing pits are a half dozen of the foremost fighter and bombing planes now in mass production in the United States.

Col. James Gillespie signals and the six (or more) wing-mounted .50 calibre guns of the Republic P-47 (Thunderbolt) pour tracer slugs into the target with an ear-pounding burst. The seven-gun battery of the P-39 (Bell Airacobra) including one 37 millimeter cannon, blasts away. A cannon burst from the North American P-51 (Mustang) and a demonstration of turret firing by a B-17 (Boeing Flying Fortress) tops off a thunderous show.

Air War Slugging Match

This war in the air is a slugging match and there's no doubt Americans have put the emphasis on carrying the biggest wallop of all, and with increasing potency, into the far-flung battle fronts.

The fighter plane that army fliers unstintingly credit with saving the British Empire in its darkest hour—the famous Spitfire V—is an aerial boxer by comparison with the heavyweight, heavily-gunned pursuits of the U. S. Army It is instructive and interesting to note that to keep pace with the demands for greater punch, the British have increased the firepower of the later models of the Spitfire, by addition of cannon in support of its battery of .30 calibre machine guns.

The .50 calibre weapons are as characteristic of the American program for air supremacy as the long range, high altitude heavy bombers which in their newest conception—now on the production line—will carry bigger bombs a greater distance than anything else that flies.

These are among factors that Army leaders consider likely to have decisive influence on the ultimate course and outcome of the war. The heavier American machine gun bullet, for instance, will probably pierce the heaviest armor now known to be part of any enemy plane's equipment. Our latest planes carry much more armor-piercing ammunition than the latest German and Japanese fighter planes.

The Japanese Zero fighter has justly earned a reputation for its maneuverability, climbing rate, and speed—especially on the getaway—but it is no match for any standard American pursuit in fire power or durability in battle. In the words of an American flying general the Zero "can't take it." He explains:

"The public has been misled by the discussion of fighters versus fighters. It should be borne in mind that the primary function of the fighter is to knock down the bomber. The Zero is a poor anti-bomber weapon. It sacrifices armor and other protective devices for speed and agility. It is strictly a hit-and-run machine and, plane for plane, no match for the American Curtiss P-40.

"The records of actual warfare have shown that American fighters and bombers in the Pacific have knocked the Zeros down 3 to 1. In many instances, the score has been higher in our favor and it must be remembered that we are just beginning, in some areas, to put our later, heavier-gunned planes into action.

Daylight raids by squadrons of the heaviest American bombers, the Boeing Flying Fortresses and Consolidated Liberators, operating from bases on the British Isles, Australia, and in the Middle East, have convinced our high command that these ships are the immediate answer to the second front of the air. The ability of these four-motored sluggers to deliver devastating blows, protect themselves in the clinches with enemy fighters, and return with relatively few losses, ranks among the war's most spectacular developments of 1942 from the Allied viewpoint.

No longer in any section of the Allied high command is there any tendency to minimize the deadly power and precision of these high-level bombers. On the contrary the best and most creative engineering minds in American industry as well as the army air forces are concentrating on making these stratospheric sluggers bigger and tougher for 1943 when the full power of this country's men and machines begins to be wielded on the world's battle fronts.

The Japanese have broadcast that America is building bombers which will carry 10,000 pounds of bombs a distance of 10,000 miles. Actually, in the processes of development and improvement of military aircraft, which constantly are going on in all countries at war, there is reason to believe that another year may witness the revolutionizing of all currently publicized concepts of air warfare.

The solid facts which may be summarized here and now, on the highest authority of the army air force, are that American boys are flying in actual combat, as of 1942, planes which can go faster and higher, possess heavier armored protection and greater fire power than those of any other nation, ally or enemy.

This does not mean that American army planes are superior now in all respects at all altitudes under all combat conditions. There are many variables, some blind spots, and deficiencies with which American technical skill is wrestling, wholly apart from the great problems of production and delivery in the volume needed for objectives on all major fronts. Yet the essential and re-assuring fact remains—based upon play-by-play combat reports, plus the laboratory tests of our planes and the enemy's—that American aircraft can give and take heavier punishment than anything Germany, Italy or Japan thus far has produced.

Club Is Opened

Cairo, Nov. 2 (AP)—A houseboat on the Nile was formally opened today as the Headquarters Club for U. S. warrant officers and non-commissioned officers in this theatre. Alexander Kirk, U. S. ambassador to Egypt, and Maj. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, commander of American forces, presided at the opening. Kirk donated the furnishings.

More Tanks Produced

Moscow, Nov. 2 (AP)—Despite the fact the Stalingrad tractor plant was not in operation, the Soviet tank industry produced more tanks in October than in September and exceeded its quota, a Tass report said today. The aviation industry also turned out more planes and motors than in September and exceeded its October quota, the report said.

War-Bound Planes Seek Rickenbacker

Planes Enroute to Fronts Fan Out in Search for Missing Flyers

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—In the hope that Captain Eddie Rickenbacker may yet be found alive, army planes en route to the South Pacific battle zones have joined the search for the World War ace and his crew of seven men.

The War Department disclosed yesterday that fliers bound for the Solomons and other fighting fronts in the Pacific have been directed to fan out over as much area as possible south of Honolulu in searching for Rickenbacker and his crew.

Department officials pointed out that fliers have been rescued from rubber rafts after floating in the Pacific for more than a month. Secretary of War Stimson four days ago said he still had hopes that Rickenbacker would be rescued, adding that the flying ace of 1917-18 was "an exception to the rules."

Rickenbacker, a confidential adviser to Stimson, was en route to the Southwest Pacific on a survey trip when he last reported 12 days ago that he had sufficient gasoline for only one hour's flying.

Use of producer gas vehicles has greatly increased in Sweden since 1940.

Wicks' Transit Law Is Upheld by Court of Appeals

Brought 27,000 Employes of I. R. T. and B. M. T. Under Civil Service Upon Unification

The Court of Appeals on Thursday, October 29, by a unanimous decision, upheld the constitutionality of the Wicks Transit Law under which 27,000 employes of the I.R.T. and B.M.T. Companies were brought under Civil Service upon transit unification.

Senator Arthur H. Wicks, Republican of Kingston, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, introduced this legislation in 1939 which was sponsored by the Transportation Benevolent Association, Inc., an organization representing thousands of transit employes.

This case was argued in the Supreme Court by H. Eliot Kaplan for the Transportation Benevolent Association and William C. Chanler for the City of New York before Justice Shientag. Justice Shientag upheld the constitutionality and summarized his own conclusions of fact and law in his opinion on the constitutionality of the Wicks law in part as follows:

"The mandate of the Constitution was fully complied with by the Legislature. The fact produced in the record before this court fully support the declared policy of the Legislature and its findings that competitive examination under the unique circumstances of this case was wholly impracticable.

"The qualifications prescribed by the Legislature for continued employment were not in any way unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious; on the contrary they constituted the most appropriate test of merit and fitness which could have been devised to enable the City to continue the uninterrupted safe and efficient operation of the acquired transit facilities. The constitutional test of merit and fitness has been reasonably applied in this case. The Legislature has not sought to evade either the letter or the spirit of the civil service requirement of the constitution, but, on the contrary, has substantially complied with the constitutional mandate under the unique circumstances involved in the unification of the transit system of the city. The classification by the Legislature in the non-competitive class of the employés of the private companies, under the conditions prescribed in the Wicks Act, was an appropriate classification which resulted in their lawful employment in the civil service. At the time of unification the positions held by the employes of the private lines were not positions in the 'suitable and conventional' field of the civil service. Unification presented an extension of the sphere of governmental activity and the Legislature could properly determine that the existing status should not be disturbed.

"And finally, the Wicks Act represents the carefully considered judgment of the Legislature as to the most practical means of extending the scope of the principle of merit and fitness to new fields. This legislative judgment should not be disturbed. The Legislature has exercised sound and reasonable judgment and discretion and has sought to comply in every substantial and feasible manner with the spirit and purpose of the civil service clause of the constitution. Even if the court differed with the wisdom of the policy of the Legislature in this case that would not be ground for overriding the legislative mandate but there is no difference of opinion here. The Wicks Law is a constitutional exercise of the legislative power."

Solicitor General Henry Epstein argued the case for the State of New York before the Court of Appeals together with Mr. Kaplan and Mr. Evarts of the Corporation Counsel's office.

In 1939 when transit unification of the City of New York was under consideration Senator Wicks drafted this law to protect the 27,000 transit employes whose jobs would have been placed in jeopardy, and to continue the safe and efficient operation of the New York city subways which carry millions of passengers daily. Despite tremendous opposition to this bill by various groups who believed that the legislation was premature and unnecessary, Senator Wicks, with amazing foresight, insisted it was needed. It was Senator Wicks opinion that should unification occur without appropriate protective legislation for the subway employes, they would not acquire civil service status upon acquisition of the subway properties by the City of New York, and consequently be either dismissed or compelled to take open competitive examinations to retain positions which they had held for many years. The opinion of the Court of Appeals upholding the constitutionality of the Wicks Law is conclusive proof of the necessity of the law.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Army Takes Over

Bedford, Ind. — Imagine the mixed emotions of Ruth Hamilton as she opened up the cafe where she is a waitress and faced 52 ravenously hungry men in army uniform.

She surveyed them with dismay. An officer comforted her with:

"Don't be alarmed. 'We're going to help you."

And they did—cooking and serving. After 35 minutes of speedy food consumption they departed amid the steady clangor of the cash register, and resumed their journey.

"What, No Peanut Shells?"

Oil City, Pa. — Here it is: Mix five pounds of bran; one can of molasses; two eggs, well beaten; brown in oven three and one-half hours.

That's the formula bus driver Jay S. Coleman follows to make his own coffee.

"We've got a substitute for rubber, why not coffee? My formula for home-made coffee will solve the shortage problem," says Coleman.

Valid Excuse

Bethlehem, Pa. — Ed White, Lehigh University sophomore, won't take anything for granted in the future.

His best girl answered his invitation to the annual houseparty this way: "I'll be there if I have to walk."

On the eve of the party she sent Ed this telegram:

"Sorry can't come. Fell and broke my leg. Can't walk."

One-shot Dyer

Sedalia, Mo. — If that poor fish hadn't gone and stuck his nose in——

Dr. D. P. Dyer aimed low and blasted away at some ducks. Four flopped over. Retrieving them, he found a black bass—speckled with shot.

What a Relief

Sandpoint, Idaho — A feminine motorist braked her car to a quick stop in front of the county jail.

"What's the matter?" she asked in a shaky voice.

"We just had an earthquake," replied a deputy sheriff.

"Oh thank goodness! I thought I had a flat tire."

CHAPLAIN DENIES MANNING GUN

AP Photo

MODENA

Modena Nov. 2—The Junior Society of Christian Education of the Modena Methodist Church met Wednesday afternoon in the Hasbrouck Memorial Hall for its regular meeting. At the conclusion of the session, crullers and sweet cider were served by Mrs. Frank Venable and Miss Marguerite Smith, teachers in charge of the group.

Scholars of the Modena school enjoyed a Halloween party Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the school.

Mrs. Horton Couch and daughter of Verbank, visited the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Venable at the Methodist parsonage, last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carmarda are moving from the bungalow on the former O. R. Smith farm to the house vacated by the Bruscia family.

Mr. and Mrs. Myron Shultis visited relatives in Kingston Wednesday.

Mrs. Harry Gerow and Mrs. Freston Paltridge, were in Newburgh Wednesday.

Harry Sutton, chairman of the salvage committee in the town of Plattekill, reports that 32 tons have been collected so far.

'Praise the Lord' Author

Lieut. (Senior Grade) Howell Forgy (above), U. S. Navy chaplain from Haddonfield, N. J., has been revealed in Pearl Harbor as the real author of the phrase "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition," variously attributed to several chaplains. Forgy, 34, was attached to a heavy cruiser during the December 7 attack on Pearl Harbor.

Chaplain's Family Agrees He Might Have Coined Words

Haddonfield, N. J., Nov. 2 (AP)—Now that they've thought it over the family of Naval Chaplain Lieutenant Howell Forgy commented today that use of the phrase "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" sounds "just like Howey."

Mrs. Maurice Forgy, mother of the 34-year-old former Muskingum (Ohio) College football star, admitted "it's a little confusing to find Howell on the front pages all of a sudden but now that I think of it that phrase is just like Howey, isn't it Ruth?" she asked his younger sister.

Ruth nodded and smiled. "He's so witty and full of puns," she explained.

News reports from the Pacific battlefield area attributed to the naval chaplain the famous fighting phrase which came out of the hell of Pearl Harbor and became America's popular battlecry and a nation wide song hit. However, some sources suggested that the phrase was originally used in Civil War days.

But despite the popularity of the song the chaplain's parents said they had not heard the melody until after receiving the news that their son had used the slogan.

"Remember when he was a student at Princeton Theological Seminary," his mother reminisced. "His fellow students used to take up collections and send him to New York to see some of the hit shows. Then he'd come back and act out all the parts for them."

The phrase originally had been attributed to Chaplain William Maguire but in New York yesterday he denied having coined the expression. At Washington there was no official comment from the army or navy on the matter.

After the six-foot, 200 pound Forgy graduated from theological seminary in 1937 he served as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Fort Collins, Colorado. Then Forgy went to Murrayville, Kentucky, and founded a new Presbyterian Church. He joined the navy after resigning his Kentucky charge.

His wife, the former Alma Louise Morgan, of Princeton, Ky., presented him with a son, Michael, three weeks ago but because of his overseas assignment Forgy has not seen the boy.

Cooperation Is Called Excellent Among Services

Survey of Anglo, Canadian and American Air Stations Reveals No Friction

(Clayton Knight, who is sketching and writing about the American, Canadian and English air forces in England and Iceland, is recognized by many as this country's leading aviation artist. In our Air Forces Corps, in the last war, he engaged in many successful battles until shot down, wounded badly, behind the German lines. Tomorrow, Mr. Knight pictures the Flying Fortresses in battle and tells you about their performance and the men who are flying them.)

By CLAYTON KNIGHT
(For the Associated Press)

London—I have been in England and Iceland visiting American, British and Canadian air stations two months now and can tell you that the cooperation among the three services is excellent.

I heard and read reports of friction before leaving New York; that this was the reason why Americans at the time were not accomplishing more in the war over Europe.

I talked with brass hats. I talked with air crews. I talked with ground crews. I talked with RAF men, RCAF men, fleet air men and of course, our own men.

I flew with the British in the last war and knew that cooperation was good then. It is infinitely better this time. "Complete cooperation" are all-encompassing words, but they're the only ones that can describe the relationship between Americans, Canadians and the English.

That close relationship doesn't cease as regards the head men of each air force, either. And the same holds true for the really close relationship between the other high officers and their men.

Airmen everywhere like to talk shop. It's their business. Dinner parties, arranged as a relaxation for the men who've spent long hours on the planning of air offensives, inevitably drift into discussions about comparative methods of using aircraft in war, of various types of planes, their strength and their weakness and the best ways of training men to use them properly.

I was present at several such gatherings and many times the "tops" of each air force also attended.

Want to meet some of these leaders?

There's Major General Carl "Toouey" Spaatz, commanding the U. S. air forces in the European theatre. A veteran air fighter from the last war, he's a tough-fibered soldier whose mental arteries nevertheless haven't hardened but have remained elastic and susceptible to new ideas.

The day I dropped in on Spaatz at his headquarters outside of London. I thought it would be a good idea to take him to meet Air Marshal H. A. "Gus" Edwards, commanding officer of the RCAF in England. Edwards had been away (in Canada) and had just arrived. Spaatz was getting settled in his headquarters.

"I said, "Gus, meet Toouey." Edwards said, "hello Toouey," and Spaatz replied, "how are you, Gus." With no other formalities the two airmen immediately plunged into a conversation about planes that lasted two hours. I can't tell you exactly what they talked about without revealing too much information, but I can tell you that they were in agreement in a certain new type of plane which the Allies need to win the war.

Tough, Lean, Wiry

Spaatz is a tough, lean, wiry little man, with sandy moustache beneath a rather prominent nose, and although his sandy hair is graying, he's still a rough customer. A graduate of West Point in 1914, he learned to fly two years later. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in France in the last war, flying a Spad, and you'll often find him in the air today.

Edwards is an equally strong, forceful officer, who learned his trade the hard way. He started as a pit boy in a mine, but by studying long hours at night educated himself to rise to the top of his profession.

He flew in the last war until taken prisoner in 1917, but put even that misfortune to his own use by learning to speak, read and write German like a native. He has broadcast to the Germans in their own tongue. He has many original ideas about the future of air fighting and some of them are bound to blast the Luftwaffe.

"When the Americans want to get something done with the British," said one American General in making his report to Washington, "they see 'Gus' Edwards. He knows how to present our case to the British and get results."

Under Spaatz, heading his fighter command, is Brig. Gen. F. "Monk" Hunter, a pilot who was credited with victories over seven German planes in World War 1. An outspoken critic, during peace times, of what he considered stupid aviation tactics, he was held down until the advent of this war. Now, rightly, he commands the American fighter group.

If Hunter is Spaatz's right hand man, Brig. Gen. Ira Eaker is his equally strong left. Eaker, formerly in command of fighter groups but now directing the operations of the all-important bomber command, also has had long and sound training.

Eaker was the pilot of the famous "Question Mark" when that plane established a world's record for sustained flight by refueling in the air. Also, he was the first army pilot to fly across the United States solely by instruments, without once checking his position by visual means. When the new flying fortresses began their daylight raids on occupied France, it was Eaker who flew in the lead plane to show the boys how it should be done.

These Are Musketeers

Spaatz, Hunter, Eaker—those are the three musketeers of the American air forces in England. Their three counterparts in the RAF are Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, commanding the RAF; Air Chief Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas of the fighter command, and Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, head of the bomber command.

Each of the three Britons, besides being veterans of the last war, have had the advantage of three years of experience in this one. They have come to the top because, through all the terrific fighting during the battle of Britain, when she was outnumbered three-to-one in the air, they kept a certain flexibility of thought combined with the fixed purpose of beating the Hun.

I got something of a surprise when I visited sturdy, ruddy-faced Sholto Douglas at his headquarters in a quiet village, where he directs fighting tactics. One thinks of fighter pilots as impulsive, rushing boys, leaping into fast airplanes and going into action. Their chief give you a different feeling.

Seeing him in his office, cool and calm, gazing out over a garden where bright flowers nod in the English breeze, you are struck with the fact that despite the apparent abandon shown at a fighter station there is cold, careful planning behind each sortie, each air battle. The triumphs of the Battle of Britain begin to seem more logical when you realize that men like this have worked out the tactics beforehand.

It was on another sunny day that I drove out of the war-pocked London to lunch with the Bomber Chief, Harris. I got something of a surprise when I met him, too.

To see him there in his home in the rolling, peaceful countryside, with his lovely wife and tiny daughter—this day clad in a sunsuit and nothing else except a bandage over her small-pox inoculation — it was difficult to associate with him "a thousand night bombers" sowing seeds of destruction in western Germany. He's nicknamed "Ginger," but his hair is nearer silver. His face is unlined and he has the tapering hands of an artist.

But however much the brains and directing force behind the aerial "second front" might appear on the soft side, that idea was soon dispelled.

Motioning me into the front seat of his Bentley, he drove to his office, tooling the speeding car around dangerous turns even as he kept up a lively discourse on the relative merits of the English heavy bombers and ours.

And then in his office, while I made a sketch of him, he went about his work in a business-like way. He signed papers and made notations one after the other—some of them, no doubt, settling the fate of some row of factories in the western Rhineland. His quick, hard decisions belied his almost effete outward appearance.

Yes, both British fighter and bomber commands seem to be in most capable hands.

Ulster Men in Elks' Aviation Cadet Training

Any young man between the age of 18 to 27 with good eyes and in good physical condition, is a good prospect for the aviation cadet training which is sponsored in this section by Poughkeepsie Lodge, 275, of Elks, working in cooperation with Technical Sergeant George Miller of the Poughkeepsie Army Recruiting Office. One hundred and eleven successful candidates have been recruited since the first of the year by this organization.

Three of these young men have already secured their commissions as second lieutenants; about 50 are in training and the balance of them are waiting their turns to go. Several of those in training will receive their commissions in the next few weeks.

Candidates for the air crew training which comprises pilots, bombardiers and navigators, must pass a mental screening test. Although a high school education is not an absolute requirement, experience shows that the tests will prove difficult for those who have not completed at least four years of high school. Certain ground crew positions as officers are open to those with college education.

Aviation cadets are paid $75 a month while training, in addition to having their maintenance and insurance furnished. At the conclusion of the training, which takes six to nine months, they are rated as flying officers or second lieutenants in the Army Air Corps. Pay is about $300 a month with additional allowances for married men.

Ernest Tinklepaugh, exalted ruler of Poughkeepsie Lodge of Elks declares that "one does not have to see the Elks in order to get into the Air Corps but we are happy to aid and advise any young man who is interested. Interested persons should write or call upon the chairman of our Defense Committee, County Clerk Frederic A. Smith. He may be reached at the Court House in Poughkeepsie."

Ulster county has furnished a sizeable number of men in the new aviation cadet training which is being sponsored by the Poughkeepsie Lodge, 275 of Elks, working in cooperation with Technical Sergeant George Miller of the Poughkeepsie Army Recruiting Office. Since January 1 of this year, the organization has recruited 111 successful candidates.

Those from this city are Robert F. Schoonmaker, John A. Palmer, Arthur Fritog, Donald R. Gemmel, John J. Byrnes, Matthew Hasbrouck, Thomas L. McNierney and Robert H. Van Buren.

Highland has contributed John M. Lockburn, Edward C. Lukach, and Howard R. Cleveland while New Paltz has offered Moncure Way, Warner G. Murphy and Thomas J. Mathen.

Rosendale is represented by Donald Ten Hagen while Frank C. Carle represents Mt. Tremper.

Ohio Test Port Finds U.S. Getting Ready for Axis

(The army air forces have geared operations to a tremendously expanded war program, involving a two-year production of possibly 150,000 planes and air personnel of 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 men. To demonstrate how the A.A.F. is keeping pace with this program, together with all developments in fighting craft production calculated to increase U. S. punching power, a group of observers recently was taken behind the scenes at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, the chief experimental and test station.)

By ALAN J. GOULD

Wright Field, Dayton, O., Nov. 2 (AP)—Three hours from Broadway's dimout, as the army cargo ship flies, you arrive in the midst of projects and preparations to turn all hell loose in the current and coming war of the air.

It seems peaceful enough as you look over a vacant golf course from the rambling brick home of the commandant, Brig. Gen. Arthur Vanaman, who was American air attache in Berlin four years and knows all about Nazi air strength. It's a concentrated close-up of destructive power as you observe what the army air forces are doing in their great testing and experimental laboratory, under the instructive guidance of Maj. Gen. Oliver Echols, head of the material command.

Take, just for example, a night demonstration of fire power staged for our benefit. Lined up in a row facing the firing pits are a half dozen of the foremost fighter and bombing planes now in mass production in the United States.

Col. James Gillespie signals and the six (or more) wing-mounted .50 calibre guns of the Republic P-47 (Thunderbolt) pour tracer slugs into the target with an ear-pounding burst. The seven-gun battery of the P-39 (Bell Airacobra) including one 37 millimeter cannon, blasts away. A cannon burst from the North American P-51 (Mustang) and a demonstration of turret firing by a B-17 (Boeing Flying Fortress) tops off a thunderous show.

Air War Slugging Match

This war in the air is a slugging match and there's no doubt Americans have put the emphasis on carrying the biggest wallop of all, and with increasing potency, into the far-flung battle fronts.

The fighter plane that army fliers unstintingly credit with saving the British Empire in its darkest hour—the famous Spitfire V—is an aerial boxer by comparison with the heavyweight, heavily-gunned pursuits of the U. S. Army. It is instructive and interesting to note that to keep pace with the demands for greater punch, the British have increased the firepower of the later models of the Spitfire, by addition of cannon in support of its battery of .30 calibre machine guns.

The .50 calibre weapons are as characteristic of the American program for air supremacy as the long range, high altitude heavy bombers which in their newest conception—now on the production line—will carry bigger bombs a greater distance than anything else that flies.

These are among factors that Army leaders consider likely to have decisive influence on the ultimate course and outcome of the war. The heavier American machine gun bullet, for instance, will probably pierce the heaviest armor now known to be part of any enemy plane's equipment. Our latest planes carry much more armor-piercing ammunition than the latest German and Japanese fighter planes.

The Japanese Zero fighter has justly earned a reputation for its maneuverability, climbing rate, and speed—especially on the get-away—but it is no match for any standard American pursuit in fire power or durability in battle. In the words of an American flying general the Zero "can't take it." He explains:

"The public has been misled by the discussion of fighters versus fighters. It should be borne in mind that the primary function of the fighter is to knock down the bomber. The Zero is a poor anti-bomber weapon. It sacrifices armor and other protective devices for speed and agility. It is strictly a hit-and-run machine and, plane for plane, no match for the American Curtiss P-40.

"The records of actual warfare have shown that American fighters and bombers in the Pacific have knocked the Zeros down 3 to 1. In many instances, the score has been higher in our favor and it must be remembered that we are just beginning, in some areas, to put our later, heavier-gunned planes into action.

Daylight raids by squadrons of the heaviest American bombers, the Boeing Flying Fortresses and Consolidated Liberators, operating from bases on the British Isles, Australia, and in the Middle East, have convinced our high command that these ships are the immediate answer to the second front of the air. The ability of these four-motored sluggers to deliver devastating blows, protect themselves in the clinches with enemy fighters, and return with relatively few losses, ranks among the war's most spectacular developments of 1942 from the Allied viewpoint.

No longer in any section of the Allied high command is there any tendency to minimize the deadly power and precision of these high-level bombers. On the contrary the best and most creative engineering minds in American industry as well as the army air forces are concentrating on making these stratospheric sluggers bigger and tougher for 1943 when the full power of this country's men and machines begins to be wielded on the world's battle fronts.

The Japanese have broadcast that America is building bombers which will carry 10,000 pounds of bombs a distance of 10,000 miles. Actually, in the processes of development and improvement of military aircraft, which constantly are going on in all countries at war, there is reason to believe that another year may witness the revolutionizing of all currently publicized concepts of air warfare.

The solid facts which may be summarized here and now, on the highest authority of the army air force, are that American boys are flying in actual combat, as of 1942, planes which can go faster and higher, possess heavier armored protection and greater fire power than those of any other nation, ally or enemy.

This does not mean that American army planes are superior now in all respects at all altitudes under all combat conditions. There are many variables, some blind spots, and deficiencies with which American technical skill is wrestling, wholly apart from the great problems of production and delivery in the volume needed for objectives on all major fronts. Yet the essential and re-assuring fact remains—based upon play-by-play combat reports, plus the laboratory tests of our planes and the enemy's—that American aircraft can give and take heavier punishment than anything Germany, Italy or Japan thus far has produced.

War-Bound Planes Seek Rickenbacker

Planes Enroute to Fronts Fan Out in Search for Missing Flyers

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—In the hope that Captain Eddie Rickenbacker may yet be found alive, army planes en route to the South Pacific battle zones have joined the search for the World War ace and his crew of seven men.

The War Department disclosed yesterday that fliers bound for the Solomons and other fighting fronts in the Pacific have been directed to fan out over as much area as possible south of Honolulu in searching for Rickenbacker and his crew.

Department officials pointed out that fliers have been rescued from rubber rafts after floating in the Pacific for more than a month. Secretary of War Stimson four days ago said he still had hopes that Rickenbacker would be rescued, adding that the flying ace of 1917-18 was "an exception to the rules."

Rickenbacker, a confidential adviser to Stimson, was en route to the Southwest Pacific on a survey trip when he last reported 12 days ago that he had sufficient gasoline for only one hour's flying.

Use of producer gas vehicles has greatly increased in Sweden since 1940.

U.S. ARMY RECRUITING AND INDUCTION SERVICE

POST OFFICE BUILDING, KINGSTON, N. Y.

"It is not enough for our Army to be as big and as well-equipped as the enemy's—it should also be as well-balanced in age groups. The Army invites American youth to answer that challenge.

"The privilege of electing their branches of the service can safely be given to the men in the younger age group for precisely the reason for which the Army needs them—their adaptability and ready response to training."

VOTING RIGHT

The eve of election finds voters with minds fully made up how they will vote tomorrow. And it is their duty to vote. The greatest danger of our government is the indifference which may result in men and women neglecting their duty to vote.

In this important election the Republican state ticket is an especially strong one. Headed by Thomas E. Dewey, it is made up of men who are capable of filling the position to which they aspire in a manner which will merit approval of all the people.

The Republican county ticket appeals with equal strength to the common sense of the thoughtful voter.

Jay LeFevre, candidate for Member of Congress, is a successful business man and is eminently qualified to serve the entire population of the 27th Congressional District. Besides Ulster he will be voted for by residents of Sullivan, Greene, Columbia and Schoharie counties.

Senator Arthur H. Wicks of the 29th Senatorial District has demonstrated the rare qualities of ability, bravery and leadership during the sixteen years he has served this district. He is chairman of the powerful state finance committee and senior Republican senator in the State Senate. He will be voted for in Greene and Delaware counties besides Ulster.

The records of John F. Wadlin, candidate for Member of Assembly, N. Levan Haver, candidate for district attorney, and Robert A. Snyder, candidate for county clerk, are so familiar to the voters they need no further commendation. Their work has been performed satisfactorily and they will continue so to perform it.

From top to bottom, the Republican ticket presents an admirable selection. There can be no greater tribute to efficiency tomorrow than a vote for each Republican candidate.

FIRES—BRUSH AND BUSH

Radio announcers and headline writers are apt to think, when news comes of a "bush fire" in Canada, that it's spelled wrong and means "brush." Then a "brush fire" in southern California spreads up in to mountains and they think fire on mountain sides must be a "forest fire." No reader can tell what's what.

Now a "brush fire" may be the burning of a small pile of cut underbrush, under control by a farmer with a rake or hoe. That's not apt to be dangerous, because most farmers have too much sense to light the brushpile when the wind is strong or in the wrong direction. But, by the same token, it isn't news.

A "brush fire" in the Santa Monica mountains is different. In the spring, grasses and small scrubby plants grow high under sun and rain. Then in the rainless season they dry up. A spark may start a field into flame, and once started it runs abroad. This is important news to every dweller in the district. The burning brush endangers everything, grazing cows, high forest, ranch buildings, schools. It is not a "bush" nor a "forest" fire unless it gets into solid woodland before it is put out by rain or human endeavor. But it's bad.

"Bush" is a word used more in Canada. It does not mean small shrub. It comes from Latin through Old French in "bosky," and by way of Dutch in "bosch." Australian or Canadian "bush" is uncultivated woodland—wild, untouched, thick forest. So a "bush fire" is, indeed, a forest fire—a raging, terrible thing.

One-fourth of all these fires are started by careless smoking.

WILL MEN KEEP HOUSE?

Mother always could do 'most anything if she had to, and a daughter is usually a chip off the old block. Both are certainly proving their mettle now. A military man who has been looking through the mills, with an eye to more man-power, is surprised to find the amount of woman-power already enlisted there.

"Even a lot of employers," he says, "apparently do not realize the extent to which women can—and will—replace men in war industry. Some of them have waked up to this fact, and it has been heartening for me to visit plants where women are now working as welders, operating turret lathes and doing other jobs that too many employers still say can't be done by women."

The only trouble about that is that men are beginning to wonder if women won't want to stay in the mills, with their good pay, after the war, and let their men do the housekeeping.

The labor situation was summed up by a restaurant keeper, replying to a customer who had complained of poor service: "Customers like you we can always get, but try and get the waiters."

EXAMINATION OF WAR WORKERS

One of the benefits resulting from the large number of untrained men seeking work in war industries is that they must undergo a physical examination. And just as army recruits are placed in different categories, so are industrial workers. Thus in Class A or Category I, the worker is physically fit for any work, with no defects found worthy of note.

Category 2—Physically fit for any work but with slight defects such as eyesight below normal, decayed teeth, overweight or underweight, varicose veins, nervousness.

Category 3—Fit only for certain employment because of physical defects such as poor eyesight, defective hearing, asthma, or hay fever, heart disease but well compensated, diabetes under control, severe varicose veins, blood pressure higher than normal.

Category 4—Unfit for any work.

While some of the benefits to the employer and the worker are at once apparent, it is of interest and help to obtain an outline of this in The Medical Clinics of North America as recorded by Dr. Grant L. Bird, Medical Director, General Motors of Canada, Ottawa, Ontario.

Benefits to employer are:

The proper placement of the employes tends to greater efficiency and greater safety.

Unjustifiable claims for compensation, or insurance for conditions which existed before being employed are to a great extent avoided.

Fellow employes are protected against contagious diseases.

Loss of time from prolonged disability or illness due to preventable disease or diseases which may be treated is definitely reduced by rejection of undesirable employes and by placing under care those who may be improved by treatment.

Selection of applicants physically suited for their duties reduces employment, training and production costs.

What about the benefits to the worker himself?

A carefully performed physical examination gives the worker a sense of security and satisfaction in his job.

Examination provides him with a knowledge of his disabilities. He may have an early diabetic, chest, or other condition which can be easily treated.

The examination places him in a position which he should be able to fill safely and satisfactorily.

The carefully recorded findings of a physical examination may be of value to him for future reference in case of accident or of any insurance disputes concerning previous existing conditions.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It is interesting to recall the days in the early 1900's when the girls wore peekaboo shirt waists and skirts to the top of their shoes. Those were the days when the Squaredealer kept staid old Kingston citizens in a state of vocal uproar as it appeared each Saturday on the streets, until it was finally suppressed.

Just what year the present low shoes for women came into style I do not recall, but today even the men have adopted the low shoe for every day wear.

I recall that on October 1, 1907, work of the building of the Ashokan dam was started, and that on October 8, of that year, the Kingston fire board decided to purchase a plot of ground on East O'Reilly street at Jansen avenue.

If I recall correctly it was bought to furnish the site of the present Central Fire Station.

During the days before the first World War I remember the open air theatre on the opposite side of the street from the Central Fire Station. This theatre stood on land on which now stands the garage of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation.

Open air theatres were popular during the summer months and I remember the one that stood on lower Broadway, near the old O'Reilly blacksmith shop, near West Union street.

Those were the days when stores in Kingston had been transformed into movie theatres with an admission charge ranging from a nickel to a dime. Among these theatres were the Lyric on the Strand, the Star on central Broadway, and the Bijou and the Novelty on Wall street.

The series of free weekly clinics held by the Board of Health at the city hall to immunize children against diphtheria recalls to mind the series of free clinics held in the old state armory on Broadway.

These clinics had been arranged by Dr. Daniel Connelly, who was health officer, and the first of the series was staked on September 23, of that year, and was attended by 1,277 children, the largest number ever to attend a clinic in the history of the city.

Dr. Connelly was assisted in administering the toxin-antitoxin by Drs. George W. Ross, Harold Van Nostrand, C. L. Gannon, Raymond Crispell, Joseph Jacobson, Frederic Holcombe, L. E. Sanford and C. B. Van Gaasbeek.

In those early days it was necessary for a child to receive three injections at the rate of one each week.

Today but one injection of serum is used.

Overall Picture of Our War With Japan Is Decidedly Hopeful, But Doesn't Mean That Victory Will Be Easy

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 2.—The overall picture of our war with Japan is decidedly hopeful. This does not mean that victory will be easy or soon. It may take at least two years or possibly three. But the facts at the moment need to be interpreted within the perspective of such a period.

Thus, it is evident that Japan is retrenching in China, drawing in her lines reluctantly. It is apparent that the heads of the Japanese Navy find themselves unable to give the Japanese Army either the munitions or the airplanes needed there for a continued offensive. The bottleneck is shipping and the Japanese tonnage is going down steadily as our submarines take a mounting toll but particularly as Japanese merchant ships find their tasks increased by the need to supply all the garrisons in the many conquered islands—an area equal to all of Europe.

Technically we are on the defensive in the Solomon Islands zone but actually in a strategic sense we are on the offensive. The naval war is a war of attrition so far as Japan is concerned. The Solomon Islands Theatre wasn't selected by us as in itself preferable to any other but when the Japanese showed signs of building an airfield for large air operations from Guadalcanal, we were compelled to take the offensive whether we were not amply prepared. Had we not done so our whole line of bases for airplanes and ships stretching from Hawaii to New Zealand would have been open to Japanese attack by air and sea and then we would certainly have been on the defensive.

Conversely, the Japanese were not ready. They had not recovered from the Battle of Midway. Their time tables and calculations and strategy were upset by our attack on the Solomons. The surprise move we made caused reverberations in Japan. The Japanese Navy had to move everything it had available to engage us in the Solomon Islands area. Each side really had to throw in all it had in the vicinity. Navy Chieftains cannot wait till they have adequate forces for a decisive battle—they figure every battle to be in some way decisive and when the issue is joined they must fight it out.

Now that the first round of what may prove to be a series of sea battles around the Solomons has been fought, we can appraise the situation objectively. Here are the facts:

1. The Japanese fleet has retired. It has not dislodged us from the Solomons or driven our fleet away from any of our bases in the South Pacific.

2. All the sinkings of American ships have been announced. The damage to some of our finest ships may temporarily deprive us of their services but the damage is not irreparable at all in any case and we have other ships available to reinforce our Pacific fleet.

3. The work of our Army, Navy and Marine Corps aviators has been superb and we have inflicted heavy damage on the enemy—far more than we ourselves suffered.

Again, however, it should be emphasized that the importance of what has happened in recent weeks cannot be measured by a box score of ships sunk or damaged on either side. The big fact remains that the United States Navy dominates the sea areas we invaded, that we are fighting in enemy territory not in our own and that Japan cannot replace losses as rapidly as we can.

Nor is it to be assumed that we plan to win back the Far Pacific for the United Nations by an island-by-island attack. That would mean ten years of fighting. Instead, we shall take only certain strategic bases for our planes and submarines and put our fleet with its aircraft carriers and our land based planes within bombing range of Japan's only arsenals—those on her mainland.

Concurrently we must be getting more and more planes into China. More significant perhaps in some respects than what happened in the Solomons — though not played up in the headlines—was the announcement the other day that our army planes had bombed Hong Kong and have been operating even north of Peiping.

The big squeeze play for us is to bomb Japanese factories from Chinese bases some day while our fleet, inferior for the time being in numbers, draws the Japanese warships to be picked off in the southern areas of the Pacific and while our submarines gradually increase their activities in the China seas.

Japan has no such advantage as Germany has with internal rail lines to her occupied areas. Japan must transport by water to China and to all her naval and air bases every bit of the gasoline, bombs, shells and munitions. Time and resources are on our side as we overcome the factors of distance and build up our supply bases overseas.

In the end, the war against Japan will be won by the attrition that has already begun—by MacArthur's planes and men moving north from Australia and New Guinea, by naval and marine forces moving up north to strategic islands protected by our fleet, and by a host of Flying Fortresses operating from China. All will have had a part in the grand strategy of victory—but it will not be next week or next month or even next year.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Lafayette Square is more than 45 minutes from Broadway and (travel being what it is these days) goodness knows how far from Sunset boulevard, but Washington's Stage Door Canteen can take its bows right along with those in New York and Hollywood.

The service men who nightly pile into the old Belasco theatre don't have to kowtow to buddies who have visited the canteens in New York or the movie city. Maybe they can't match autograph for autograph if you stick strictly to stage and screen entertainment, but they can tie them or maybe top them if it's just a matter of collecting who's who.

Helen Hayes, a native Washingtonian, has been around so often, she's almost as well known to the boys who visit the Capital Stage Door Canteen as Mrs. Lawrence Langner, who is in charge. Ina Claire, also a native, has been around too, not to mention Dorothy Lamour, Lily Damita, the Lunts, John Boles, a couple of guys in uniform named Ezra Stone and Burgess Meredith, etcetera.

Alfred Lunt, who was around for a couple of weeks with his pre-Broadway appearance in "The Pirate," did just as good a job as menu advisor in Washington as he did in New York. I don't really believe there's any truth in that story that he examined the garbage to find out "what the boys didn't eat," but no buck private on KP ever did a better job of cleaning up.

Still the boys in the uniforms of any of the services have something that the lads who stick strictly to Hollywood and Broadway haven't got. For example Leon Henderson, the price man; Speaker Sam Rayburn; and Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Maritime Commission, washing dishes.

Every few nights Lieut. Charles Brendler brings in his Navy band; and other times, its one from the Coast Guard, Marines, or one of the Army units. These crack musical units can't go as far away as Hollywood or even New York—they never can tell when the War or Navy Department will need them on the double quick.

Every night at each of the Stage Door Canteens, there's an "angel's table." The cover charge is pretty high, like $200 a plate and up. In Hollywood, there are producers, stars, writers and even associate producers to buy them. In New York, there's Wall Street, Park Avenue and Broadway.

But where else would you get an "angel" for the evening like Joseph Davies, who not only puts his spread on the table with the staggering cover charge, but autographs copies of his book "Mission to Moscow," for the boys.

The Belasco is just one "yoohoo" and a cigaret flip from the White House. There's been no indication yet from the White House that it is even cognizant of the hilarious noise that comes from the neighboring night club.

Local Coffee Sales Will Be Frozen

November 21 Is Deadline; O.P.A. Is Acting Under W.P.B.'s Orders

All sales of coffee at retail in Kingston will be frozen at midnight, November 21, for the week before rationing starts, but householders who this week have attempted to purchase coffee in the local stores have either been unable to obtain any, or have been allowed a half pound to a pound with their order.

The Office of Price Administration has been directed by the War Production Board to undertake the rationing of coffee after it became apparent that the available coffee supply in retail stores—65 per cent of normal—was insufficient to meet consumer demand.

This, according to the O.P.A., was largely due to excessive buying by consumers. The 35% curtailment of deliveries to retail stores resulted from a W.P.B. limitation order requiring restriction of sales from roaster to wholesaler to retailer, which resulted in turn from lack of ships to bring coffee in normal quantities from Central and South America, according to the O.P.A.

With the sale of coffee frozen at midnight November 21, for the week before rationing starts, in order to permit retailers to stock their shelves for the beginning of rationed sales, every person in the country, 15 years old or over, will be entitled to a ration of one pound of coffee each five weeks.

Consumers will get their first coffee ration by surrendering the last stamp of their War Ration Book No. 1, the book now used only for sugar rations. Subsequent rations of coffee will be on coupons taken in sequence toward the center of the book. Specifically, the stamp numbers are 28 down to 19. Use of the book for sugar will continue exactly as in the past. Those who did not obtain War Ration Book No. 1 may get it from their local War Price and Ration Boards now.

Gas May Be Cut

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—Householders were warned today that because of the demands of war plants, coupled with the shortage of oil and coal, domestic consumption of gas must be sharply curtailed this winter. The War Production Board said last night that the needs of war industries was reducing the reserve margins of many gas plants "to a point where actual shortages may occur during cold weather unless domestic consumption is reduced."

LaGuardia Asks Phone Company Assist Campaign

New York, Nov. 2-(AP)- Mayor La Guardia has called upon the New York Telephone Company for "more cooperation" in the current campaign against gambling in the city.

In his weekly radio talk yesterday, La Guardia expressed doubt that the "complicated telephone service set-ups" used by bookmakers could operate without the company's knowledge, asserting:

"The more I get into this thing, the more I wonder if it is possible for such vast, expensive, complicated telephone service set ups as have been found operating under these tinhorns and gamblers and criminals and thieves to be operating without the knowledge of the New York telephone company.

"Just think, telephone numbers are falsely listed. They have a Manhattan number when the call is shifted to a den or hideout in New Jersey. Now the telephone company does the listing, the telephone company installs the instruments in these hideouts in Jersey, and they must also have additional bookkeeping in making extra charges to the tinhorns' accounts.

"Now, Mr. New York Telephone Company, I've been very nice about this, but I want more cooperation and I'll take it up not only with your board of directors but with all of your stockholders, because there are many decent men and women stockholders of the New York Telephone Company or its Parent Company, who do not want to be partners or associates of the tinhorns and the thieves and the gamblers who are breaking up homes and stealing the food from the mouths of our little children."

In a previous broadcast, La Guardia referred to such listings conceding that it was proper in many cases of legitmate business concerns situated outside of New York State, and also that the telephone company was prompt in discontinuing service in instances where evidence was submitted to show it was being used illegally.

Canada Freezes More Industries

Permits Become Necessary to Open New Business

Ottawa, Nov. 2 (AP)—Canada's war economy slipped into a higher gear today and most Canadians felt the resulting change as a series of freezing orders and restrictions went into effect with the opening of business.

Perhaps the most sweeping alteration in Canadian business life was contained in the order by the Board of Prices freezing a variety of business establishments at their present status and forbidding the starting of new businesses except by permit. The creation of new selling outlets, stocking of lines of goods not already handled and moving to larger premises is prohibited except by permit.

The order applies to manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and ten types of service businesses such as undertaking and embalming, laundering, hairdressing and plumbing and heating.

Palestine May Be Home for Jews

Willkie Suggests Post-War 'Home for European Jews'

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie says Palestine will have to be opened to the homeless Jews of central and eastern Europe who survive the war and "the extent of that emigration must be measured by the needs of the Jewish people."

In a telegram to a mass meeting observing the 25th anniversary of the Balfour declaration by England, Willkie said yesterday that the "case" of the Jews for a national home "has always rested upon historic rights and international law."

"Hitler's program of extermination of the Jewish people," the message continued, "has made it a case for the conscience of mankind. . . .

"While one cannot foresee the exact organization which will follow this war, the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine in fulfillment of the promise contained in the Balfour declaration must find its rightful place in the new world order of tomorrow."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D.-Utah), addressing the meeting, asked for "the recognition of the fighting Jews of Palestine as our allies" and declared "we seek the establishment of a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine as one of our war aims and peace aims."

Wicks' Transit Law Is Upheld by Court of Appeals

Brought 27,000 Employes of I. R. T. and B. M. T. Under Civil Service Upon Unification

The Court of Appeals on Thursday, October 29, by a unanimous decision, upheld the constitutionality of the Wicks Transit Law under which 27,000 employes of the I.R.T. and B.M.T. Companies were brought under Civil Service upon transit unification.

Senator Arthur H. Wicks, Republican of Kingston, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, introduced this legislation in 1939 which was sponsored by the Transportation Benevolent Association, Inc., an organization representing thousands of transit employes.

This case was argued in the Supreme Court by H. Eliot Kaplan for the Transportation Benevolent Association and William C. Chanler for the City of New York before Justice Shientag. Justice Shientag upheld the constitutionality and summarized his own conclusions of fact and law in his opinion on the constitutionality of the Wicks law in part as follows:

"The mandate of the Constitution was fully complied with by the Legislature. The fact produced in the record before this court fully support the declared policy of the Legislature and its findings that competitive examination under the unique circumstances of this case was wholly impracticable.

"The qualifications prescribed by the Legislature for continued employment were not in any way unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious; on the contrary they constituted the most appropriate test of merit and fitness which could have been devised to enable the City to continue the uninterrupted safe and efficient operation of the acquired transit facilities. The constitutional test of merit and fitness has been reasonably applied in this case. The Legislature has not sought to evade either the letter or the spirit of the civil service requirement of the constitution, but, on the contrary, has substantially complied with the constitutional mandate under the unique circumstances involved in the unification of the transit system of the city. The classification by the Legislature in the non-competitive class of the employés of the private companies, under the conditions prescribed in the Wicks Act, was an appropriate classification which resulted in their lawful employment in the civil service. At the time of unification the positions held by the employes of the private lines were not positions in the 'suitable and conventional' field of the civil service. Unification presented an extension of the sphere of governmental activity and the Legislature could properly determine that the existing status should not be disturbed.

"And finally, the Wicks Act represents the carefully considered judgment of the Legislature as to the most practical means of extending the scope of the principle of merit and fitness to new fields. This legislative judgment should not be disturbed. The Legislature has exercised sound and reasonable judgment and discretion and has sought to comply in every substantial and feasible manner with the spirit and purpose of the civil service clause of the constitution. Even if the court differed with the wisdom of the policy of the Legislature in this case that would not be ground for overriding the legislative mandate but there is no difference of opinion here. The Wicks Law is a constitutional exercise of the legislative power."

Solicitor General Henry Epstein argued the case for the State of New York before the Court of Appeals together with Mr. Kaplan and Mr. Evarts of the Corporation Counsel's office.

In 1939 when transit unification of the City of New York was under consideration Senator Wicks drafted this law to protect the 27,000 transit employes whose jobs would have been placed in jeopardy, and to continue the safe and efficient operation of the New York city subways which carry millions of passengers daily. Despite tremendous opposition to this bill by various groups who believed that the legislation was premature and unnecessary, Senator Wicks, with amazing foresight, insisted it was needed. It was Senator Wicks opinion that should unification occur without appropriate protective legislation for the subway employes, they would not acquire civil service status upon acquisition of the subway properties by the City of New York, and consequently be either dismissed or compelled to take open competitive examinations to retain positions which they had held for many years. The opinion of the Court of Appeals upholding the constitutionality of the Wicks Law is conclusive proof of the necessity of the law.

Army Takes Over

Bedford, Ind. — Imagine the mixed emotions of Ruth Hamilton as she opened up the cafe where she is a waitress and faced 52 ravenously hungry men in army uniform.

She surveyed them with dismay. An officer comforted her with:

"Don't be alarmed. We're going to help you."

And they did—cooking and serving. After 35 minutes of speedy food consumption they departed amid the steady clangor of the cash register, and resumed their journey.

"What, No Peanut Shells?"

Oil City, Pa. — Here it is: Mix five pounds of bran; one can of molasses; two eggs, well beaten; brown in oven three and one-half hours.

That's the formula bus driver Jay S. Coleman follows to make his own coffee.

"We've got a substitute for rubber, why not coffee? My formula for home-made coffee will solve the shortage problem," says Coleman.

Valid Excuse

Bethlehem, Pa. — Ed White, Lehigh University sophomore, won't take anything for granted in the future.

His best girl answered his invitation to the annual houseparty this way: "I'll be there if I have to walk."

On the eve of the party she sent Ed this telegram:

"Sorry can't come. Fell and broke my leg. Can't walk."

What a Relief

Sandpoint, Idaho — A feminine motorist braked her car to a quick stop in front of the county jail.

"What's the matter?" she asked in a shaky voice.

"We just had an earthquake," replied a deputy sheriff.

"Oh thank goodness! I thought I had a flat tire."

CHAPLAIN DENIES MANNING GUN.

MODENA

Modena Nov. 2—The Junior Society of Christian Education of the Modena Methodist Church met Wednesday afternoon in the Hasbrouck Memorial Hall for its regular meeting. At the conclusion of the session, crullers and sweet cider were served by Mrs. Frank Venable and Miss Marguerite Smith, teachers in charge of the group.

Scholars of the Modena school enjoyed a Halloween party Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the school.

Mrs. Horton Couch and daughter of Verbank, visited the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Venable at the Methodist parsonage, last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carnarda are moving from the bungalow on the former O. R. Smith farm to the house vacated by the Bruscia family.

Mr. and Mrs. Myron Shultis visited relatives in Kingston Wednesday.

Mrs. Harry Gerow and Mrs. Freston Paltridge, were in Newburgh Wednesday.

Harry Sutton, chairman of the salvage committee in the town of Plattekill, reports that 32 tons have been collected so far.

'Praise the Lord' Author

Lieut. (Senior Grade) Howell Forgy (above), U. S. Navy chaplain from Haddonfield, N. J., has been revealed in Pearl Harbor as the real author of the phrase "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition," variously attributed to several chaplains. Forgy, 34, was attached to a heavy cruiser during the December 7 attack on Pearl Harbor.

Chaplain's Family Agrees He Might Have Coined Words

Haddonfield, N. J., Nov. 2 (AP)—Now that they've thought it over the family of Naval Chaplain Lieutenant Howell Forgy commented today that use of the phrase "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" sounds "just like Howey."

Mrs. Maurice Forgy, mother of the 34-year-old former Muskingum (Ohio) College football star, admitted "it's a little confusing to find Howell on the front pages all of a sudden but now that I think of it that phrase is just like Howey, isn't it Ruth?" she asked his younger sister.

Ruth nodded and smiled. "He's so witty and full of puns," she explained.

News reports from the Pacific battlefield area attributed to the naval chaplain the famous fighting phrase which came out of the hell of Pearl Harbor and became America's popular battlecry and a nation wide song hit. However, some sources suggested that the phrase was originally used in Civil War days.

But despite the popularity of the song the chaplain's parents said they had not heard the melody until after receiving the news that their son had used the slogan.

"Remember when he was a student at Princeton Theological Seminary," his mother reminisced. "His fellow students used to take up collections and send him to New York to see some of the hit shows. Then he'd come back and act out all the parts for them."

The phrase originally had been attributed to Chaplain William Maguire but in New York yesterday he denied having coined the expression. At Washington there was no official comment from the army or navy on the matter.

After the six-foot, 200 pound Forgy graduated from theological seminary in 1937 he served as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Fort Collins, Colorado. Then Forgy went to Murrayville, Kentucky, and founded a new Presbyterian Church. He joined the navy after resigning his Kentucky charge.

His wife, the former Alma Louise Morgan, of Princeton, Ky., presented him with a son, Michael, three weeks ago but because of his overseas assignment Forgy has not seen the boy.

The United States was represented by a man carrying an American flag in this year's parade in La Paz, Bolivia, celebrating the anniversary of Murillo, who gave the first cry for liberty in that country.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home

BY John Barclay

AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

How To Obtain Heating Satisfaction

ANOTHER heating season will soon be upon us. When tending to the furnace, let us resolve not to follow those habits which waste money, coal, and cause inconvenience and discomfort.

There are ten such bad habits which every homeowner would do well to avoid:

1. Excessive shaking of the grates: A gentle shaking will serve the same purpose and save fuel. Shake only until the first red glow appears in the ashpit, not until live pieces of coal drop through the grate.
2. Using ashes for banking purposes: The only place for ashes is in the ashpit—with the exception of a thin layer upon the grates. If you fire ashes on top of live coals, you can expect clinker trouble and poor heat.
3. Burning rubbish or garbage in your furnace: Your furnace was built to burn coal, and you shouldn't put any foreign substance in it, as clinkers often result and fuel is wasted as a consequence.
4. Operating dirty boiler, heater, flue pipe or chimney: A clean heating plant—like a clean automobile engine—will give better service and greater comfort. Remove all soot and fly ash at least once a year.
5. Connecting two heaters into same chimney flue: This practice retards the draft and causes poor heat. If two heaters are connected into the same flue, make sure the draft on the one not being operated is completely shut off and all leaks sealed.
6. Operating hot air furnace without water in the humidifier: Dry air is both uncomfortable and unhealthy. You will get much more satisfaction from your furnace if the humidifier pan is kept filled with water. This is an important health measure.
7. Carrying thin fire bed: The firebox should be filled flush with the lower edge of the fire door. Contrary to the belief held by many people that a half filled firebox saves coal, it actually burns up more coal and at the same time causes much unnecessary inconvenience. A thick fire bed burns better, lasts longer and saves money.
8. Operating your furnace with damper controls disconnected: Strange as it may seem, some people do not bother to keep their damper controls in good working order. These controls are as necessary to your furnace as brakes are to an automobile. They are simple to operate. If handled properly they will save much fuel and add greatly to the comfort of your home. Your fuel dealer can instruct you in the correct use of dampers.
9. Using incorrect sized coal: For best heating results always use the size coal best suited for your heater. Today coal is prepared in several sizes, one of which is sure to give you best results. If the coal is too small it packs too much in the fuel bed. When this takes place it is sometimes difficult to bring up heat quickly. Other troubles may also be caused from a fuel bed that is "packed." Because of the blasting that is necessary it is sometimes very difficult to have the draft pass through this bed of coals. The heat may be retained to such an extent that there may be a possibility of clinkers forming. If the coal is too large in size the air will pass through it too quickly and actually rob heat from the fuel bed. Be sure the correct size of coal is being used.
10. Incorrect Methods of firing: Always fire the coal so that the fuel bed assumes more or less a level position. The depth of the fuel bed will vary depending upon the size of the fire box. Fire the coal level with the bottom of the firing door, always leaving a strip of red coal exposed to act as a pilot light to ignite the gas that will come off from the fresh fuel.

Follow the above suggestions and you will be sure to get more heat that will result in comfortable and healthy conditions during the Winter. If you are in doubt about the correct operation of your heating plant, call on your local fuel dealer. He will be more than pleased to render this service. (1)

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

This year if you'll work twice as hard as you have ever worked before in your life, you'll probably get just a little bit less business than you had last year, but, you'll still be in business.

In these days when emphasis is placed on income it is well to remember what Will Rogers said on that subject.

He maintained that "it isn't so much what you earn as how you spend it."

It would be better for all of us, and for the country as a whole, if we placed emphasis where Rogers did — then government might not have to do so much to check inflation.

Friend—You say you pay only $25 for this beautiful apartment?

Man—Yes, but I'm going to move.

Friend—Good gracious, what has come over you?

Man—A soprano singer.

The Self-Made Man

He boasted to his friends and said:
"I am a self-made man,
Whate'er within my makeup comes
is after my own plan."
But the pattern of his life, they said, was like a crazy quilt;
With scant hopes he'd amount to much unless he was rebuilt.
—Harry Brokaw.

Lily—Do you think she will make him a good wife?

Billy—I don't know, but she'll sure make him a good husband if she gets the chance.

Ideals are funny things. They won't work unless you do.

Butler—I saw you out with a woman last night, and she wasn't your wife.

Master—Well, well, you don't say.

Butler—Not if you raise my salary.

"In time of war, the laughter of the people can be a national tonic—and the circus clown a great physician."—Epictetus.

She—I've always had a presentiment that I should die young.

Dearest Friend—Well, darling, you didn't after all, did you?

Read somewhere that we move in our sleep on an average of every 16 minutes. I weigh 150 pounds in the raw and if I changed position four times an hour I could move 600 pounds an hour. If I were to spend eight hours in bed every night I would move 48,000 pounds every night. I've decided that's why I'm so tired in the morning I can hardly get out of bed.

An elderly maiden aunt received this note from her ten-year-old niece: "Dear Aunt Martha: Thank you for your nice present. I have always wanted a pincushion, although not very much."

The American span of life has been increased 12 years since the turn of the present century. It had to be to take care of the tax bills.

Best observation on the war to date: "There are no atheists in fox holes!"

If you have begun to accept things as they are, and quit trying to change them, you're growing old.

A Chicago theatre recently advertised for an organist and pianist, either a lady or a gentleman. One of the replies was rather unusual. It read:

"Dear Sir: I notice you have a vacancy for a pianist and organist, either a lady of a gentleman. Having been both for a number of years, I would like to apply for the position.

Bible Society Holds Its Annual Meet at St. James

The Ulster County Bible Society held its annual business meeting in St. James Methodist Church October 29 and elected officers for the ensuing year. The Rev. Arthur S. Cole was again chosen as president. The other officers are: First Vice President, Mrs. Irving W. Scott; Second Vice President, H. Westlake Coons; Secretary, the Rev. J. B. Steketee; Associate Secretary, William H. Barringer; Treasurer, Dr. S. W. Ryder. The society re-elected Dr. Ryder and Messrs. Barringer and Coons as directors for the term of three years. The trustees chosen were: Messrs. Irving W. Scott, Hubert Brink, William H. Cornell and the Rev. R. B. Guice and the Rev. A. S. Cole. The society voted, recommending the secretary, the Rev. J. B. Steketee, for life membership in the American Bible Society, and appropriated $50 to the work of that society. Bibles were ordered to assist in religious education work in the Saugerties schools. The members voted that the annual meeting should be held on the last Thursday of October. Last year the society contributed to the Emergency Fund as well as to the regular work of the parent society, in New York. In this, its 127th year, the society clings to its purpose of raising funds for the distribution of the Bible "without note or comment," throughout this country. In the evening, a public meeting was held in the same church and the speaker was the Rev. Dr. James Oscar Boyd, the American Bible Society's secretary in charge of the department of versions. He gave a graphic account of the needs the society seeks to supply.

Dimond, Native Of Mohawk, Sees Catskills as Hills

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—Outdoor activity in New York's Mohawk valley in his youth provided Anthony J. Dimond with the health and physique to carry him through the rigors of a prospector's life in Alaska to the office of Alaskan delegate to Congress.

But now, after years of tramping around Arctic territory with its "immense rivers and mountains," New York's Mohawk river and Catskill mountains look "like a creek and hills" to the 60-year-old Dimond.

"I was amazed at the appearance of the Mohawk river and the Catskill mountains when I returned to New York in 1918," he said. "I always regarded the Mohawk as a sizeable river and the Catskills as big mountains."

Dimond left his farm home in Stone Arabia, Montgomery county, 38 years ago for Alaska. For 11 years, he panned gold in Calamity Gulch and prospected the southern Alaska goldfields. He failed to find the fortune he expected, but he won fame as one of Alaska's foremost political leaders and an astute student of the Arctic territory's strategic value to the United States.

Five years before Pearl Harbor, he warned Congress that Japanese "fishing" boats in Alaskan waters carried Nipponese naval officers intent on collecting information of military value. He was instrumental in getting Alaska's outmoded defenses modernized and was an early advocate of the Alaskan highway through Canada, now nearing completion under the supervision of Army engineers.

He believes that after the war Alaska will be the land of opportunity for Americans hardy enough to stand the rigors of outdoor life. "It is a frontier country with all the opportunities the old west presented to the pioneers," he said, "but it's going to take tough men willing to work hard to develop it."

Dimond's career as a prospector ended when he suffered a leg injury. He resumed the study of law which he had begun in New York and was admitted to the bar in Alaska. Success came quickly in a land where there were few lawyers. He married and settled down in Valdez, a coastal city in southern Alaska.

He was United States commissioner for a year and an assistant United States attorney and mayor of Valdez for several years before the people of Alaska sent him to Congress in 1933 as their delegate.

Although he considers himself an Alaskan now, Dimond still retains an affection for New York. During his prospecting days, he said, he frequently encountered fellow prospectors from New York "and we always sat down and talked about things back in the Empire State." Joseph H. Murray, former Amsterdam lawyer with whom Dimond went to Alaska in 1904, is still there, the delegate said, practicing law in Cordova.

During a conversation recently with Representative Byrne of Albany, Dimond remarked he had attended St. Mary's Catholic Institute in Amsterdam.

"Did you know Sister Marcellus there?" Byrne asked.

"Certainly, she was our mother superior," Dimond replied.

"Well, she was my cousin," said Byrne.

Dimond still has close family connections with New York. A brother, Roy, a lumber dealer, lives in Fonda, and another brother, Herbert, is a lawyer in New York.

The A.L.P. claims the balance of power on that showing, since Lehman won by 64,000.

Dewey supporters drew added encouragement from Willkie's Saturday night endorsement, in which the 1940 Republican presidential candidate said he would vote the entire Republican state ticket in anticipation it "will give New York a liberal government."

Election of Dewey would make him a strong possibility for the 1944 presidential nomination, in which Willkie again is expected to figure prominently.

A Bennett victory on the other hand could mean control of New York's delegation to the Democratic National Convention for Farley, who obtained Bennett's nomination over objections of President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt, however, since has endorsed the attorney general twice.

Farley declared last night that election of Dewey "would remove every vestige of home rule in the state of New York."

"He knows too much about the effect of fear and the threat of investigation to be safe in a position where he can use these un-American elements to force his will," Farley asserted.

The attack followed a Saturday night speech in which Dewey assailed Farley and national Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn as "poltical has-beens." Bennett meanwhile cited the 1937 filing of incorporation papers of the German-American Bund of Buffalo, bearing, he said, the law firm name of "Ladd, Garono and Jaeckle, Buffalo, N. Y."

"The Jaeckle was Edwin F. Jaeckle, Republican state chairman," Bennett said in a Tammany Hall speech.

Jaeckle called Bennett's "imputations" a "premeditated falsehood" and said the attorney general "has proved himself a traitor to the American Legion and has slandered his own comrades."

"The photograph he used claiming that it showed me present before marching German storm troopers," Jaeckle explained, "was in fact a photograph of the famous American Legion Drum Corps."

Besides a governor, voters will elect a lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller, complete state senate and assembly, two representatives-at-large and 43 district representatives. The fight of Rep. Hamilton Fish (R) for reelection in President Roosevelt's home district features the congressional races.

Polls throughout the state will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Dewey, Bennett and Alfange planned final radio appeals tonight, with Farley also to broadcast.

VOTING RIGHT

The eve of election finds voters with minds fully made up how they will vote tomorrow. And it is their duty to vote. The greatest danger of our government is the indifference which may result in men and women neglecting their duty to vote.

In this important election the Republican state ticket is an especially strong one. Headed by Thomas E. Dewey, it is made up of men who are capable of filling the position to which they aspire in a manner which will merit approval of all the people.

The Republican county ticket appeals with equal strength to the common sense of the thoughtful voter.

Jay LeFevre, candidate for Member of Congress, is a successful business man and is eminently qualified to serve the entire population of the 27th Congressional District. Besides Ulster he will be voted for by residents of Sullivan, Greene, Columbia and Schoharie counties.

Senator Arthur H. Wicks of the 29th Senatorial District has demonstrated the rare qualities of ability, bravery and leadership during the sixteen years he has served this district. He is chairman of the powerful state finance committee and senior Republican senator in the State Senate. He will be voted for in Greene and Delaware counties besides Ulster.

The records of John F. Wadlin, candidate for Member of Assembly, N. Levan Haver, candidate for district attorney, and Robert A. Snyder, candidate for county clerk, are so familiar to the voters they need no further commendation. Their work has been performed satisfactorily and they will continue so to perform it.

From top to bottom, the Republican ticket presents an admirable selection. There can be no greater tribute to efficiency tomorrow than a vote for each Republican candidate.

FIRES—BRUSH AND BUSH

Radio announcers and headline writers are apt to think, when news comes of a "bush fire" in Canada, that it's spelled wrong and means "brush." Then a "brush fire" in southern California spreads up in to mountains and they think fire on mountain sides must be a "forest fire." No reader can tell what's what.

Now a "brush fire" may be the burning of a small pile of cut underbrush, under control by a farmer with a rake or hoe. That's not apt to be dangerous, because most farmers have too much sense to light the brushpile when the wind is strong or in the wrong direction. But, by the same token, it isn't news.

A "brush fire" in the Santa Monica mountains is different. In the spring, grasses and small scrubby plants grow high under sun and rain. Then in the rainless season they dry up. A spark may start a field into flame, and once started it runs abroad. This is important news to every dweller in the district. The burning brush endangers everything, grazing cows, high forest, ranch buildings, schools. It is not a "bush" nor a "forest" fire unless it gets into solid woodland before it is put out by rain or human endeavor. But it's bad.

"Bush" is a word used more in Canada. It does not mean small shrub. It comes from Latin through Old French in "bosky," and by way of Dutch in "bosch." Australian or Canadian "bush" is uncultivated woodland—wild, untouched, thick forest. So a "bush fire" is, indeed, a forest fire—a raging, terrible thing.

One-fourth of all these fires are started by careless smoking.

WILL MEN KEEP HOUSE?

Mother always could do most anything if she had to, and a daughter is usually a chip off the old block. Both are certainly proving their mettle now. A military man who has been looking through the mills, with an eye to more man-power, is surprised to find the amount of woman-power already enlisted there.

"Even a lot of employers," he says, "apparently do not realize the extent to which women can—and will—replace men in war industry. Some of them have waked up to this fact, and it has been heartening for me to visit plants where women are now working as welders, operating turret lathes and doing other jobs that too many employers still say can't be done by women."

The only trouble about that is that men are beginning to wonder if women won't want to stay in the mills, with their good pay, after the war, and let their men do the housekeeping.

The labor situation was summed up by a restaurant keeper, replying to a customer who had complained of poor service: "Customers like you we can always get, but try and get the waiters."

EXAMINATION OF WAR WORKERS

One of the benefits resulting from the large number of untrained men seeking work in war industries is that they must undergo a physical examination. And just as army recruits are placed in different categories, so are industrial workers. Thus in Class A or Category I, the worker is physically fit for any work, with no defects found worthy of note.

Category 2—Physically fit for any work but with slight defects such as eyesight below normal, decayed teeth, overweight or underweight, varicose veins, nervousness.

Category 3—Fit only for certain employment because of physical defects such as poor eyesight, defective hearing, asthma, or hay fever, heart disease but well compensated, diabetes under control, severe varicose veins, blood pressure higher than normal.

Category 4—Unfit for any work.

While some of the benefits to the employer and the worker are at once apparent, it is of interest and help to obtain an outline of this in The Medical Clinics of North America as recorded by Dr. Grant L. Bird, Medical Director, General Motors of Canada, Ottawa, Ontario.

Benefits to employer are:

The proper placement of the employes tends to greater efficiency and greater safety.

Unjustifiable claims for compensation, or insurance for conditions which existed before being employed are to a great extent avoided.

Fellow employes are protected against contagious diseases.

Loss of time from prolonged disability or illness due to preventable disease or diseases which may be treated is definitely reduced by rejection of undesirable employes and by placing under care those who may be improved by treatment.

Selection of applicants physically suited for their duties reduces employment, training and production costs.

What about the benefits to the worker himself?

A carefully performed physical examination gives the worker a sense of security and satisfaction in his job.

Examination provides him with a knowledge of his disabilities. He may have an early diabetic, chest, or other condition which can be easily treated.

The examination places him in a position which he should be able to fill safely and satisfactorily.

The carefully recorded findings of a physical examination may be of value to him for future reference in case of accident or of any insurance disputes concerning previous existing conditions.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It is interesting to recall the days in the early 1900's when the girls wore peekaboo shirt waists and skirts to the top of their shoes. Those were the days when the Squaredealer kept staid old Kingston citizens in a state of vocal uproar as it appeared each Saturday on the streets, until it was finally suppressed.

Just what year the present low shoes for women came into style I do not recall, but today even the men have adopted the low shoe for every day wear.

I recall that on October 1, 1907, work of the building of the Ashokan dam was started, and that on October 8, of that year, the Kingston fire board decided to purchase a plot of ground on East O'Reilly street at Jansen avenue.

If I recall correctly it was bought to furnish the site of the present Central Fire Station.

During the days before the first World War I remember the open air theatre on the opposite side of the street from the Central Fire Station. This theatre stood on land on which now stands the garage of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation.

Open air theatres were popular during the summer months and I remember the one that stood on lower Broadway, near the old O'Reilly blacksmith shop, near West Union street.

Those were the days when stores in Kingston had been transformed into movie theatres with an admission charge ranging from a nickel to a dime. Among these theatres were the Lyric on the Strand, the Star on central Broadway, and the Bijou and the Novelty on Wall street.

The series of free weekly clinics held by the Board of Health at the city hall to immunize children against diphtheria recalls to mind the series of free clinics held in the old state armory on Broadway.

These clinics had been arranged by Dr. Daniel Connelly, who was health officer, and the first of the series was staked on September 23, of that year, and was attended by 1,277 children, the largest number ever to attend a clinic in the history of the city.

Dr. Connelly was assisted in administering the toxin-antitoxin by Drs. George W. Ross, Harold Van Nostrand, C. L. Gannon, Raymond Crispell, Joseph Jacobson, Frederic Holcombe, L. E. Sanford and C. B. Van Gaasbeek.

In those early days it was necessary for a child to receive three injections at the rate of one each week.

Today but one injection of serum is used.

Although Japan is offering substantial subsidies to Japanese who migrate to Manchuria few are accepting.

Overall Picture of Our War With Japan Is Decidedly Hopeful, But Doesn't Mean That Victory Will Be Easy

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 2.—The overall picture of our war with Japan is decidedly hopeful. This does not mean that victory will be easy or soon. It may take at least two years or possibly three. But the facts at the moment need to be interpreted within the perspective of such a period.

Thus, it is evident that Japan is retrenching in China, drawing in her lines reluctantly. It is apparent that the heads of the Japanese Navy find themselves unable to give the Japanese Army either the munitions or the airplanes needed there for a continued offensive. The bottleneck is shipping and the Japanese tonnage is going down steadily as our submarines take a mounting toll but particularly as Japanese merchant ships find their tasks increased by the need to supply all the garrisons in the many conquered islands—an area equal to all of Europe.

Technically we are on the defensive in the Solomon Islands zone but actually in a strategic sense we are on the offensive. The naval war is a war of attrition so far as Japan is concerned. The Solomon Islands Theatre wasn't selected by us as in itself preferable to any other but when the Japanese showed signs of building an airfield for large air operations from Guadalcanal, we were compelled to take the offensive whether we were not amply prepared. Had we not done so our whole line of bases for airplanes and ships stretching from Hawaii to New Zealand would have been open to Japanese attack by air and sea and then we would certainly have been on the defensive.

Conversely, the Japanese were not ready. They had not recovered from the Battle of Midway. Their time tables and calculations and strategy were upset by our attack on the Solomons. The surprise move we made caused reverberations in Japan. The Japanese Navy had to move everything it had available to engage us in the Solomon Islands area. Each side really had to throw in all it had in the vicinity. Navy Chieftains cannot wait till they have adequate forces for a decisive battle—they figure every battle to be in some way decisive and when the issue is joined they must fight it out.

Now that the first round of what may prove to be a series of sea battles around the Solomons has been fought, we can appraise the situation objectively. Here are the facts:

1. The Japanese fleet has retired. It has not dislodged us from the Solomons or driven our fleet away from any of our bases in the South Pacific.

2. All the sinkings of American ships have been announced. The damage to some of our finest ships may temporarily deprive us of their services but the damage is not irreparable at all in any case and we have other ships available to reinforce our Pacific fleet.

3. The work of our Army, Navy and Marine Corps aviators has been superb and we have inflicted heavy damage on the enemy—far more than we ourselves suffered.

Again, however, it should be emphasized that the importance of what has happened in recent weeks cannot be measured by a box score of ships sunk or damaged on either side. The big fact remains that the United States Navy dominates the sea areas we invaded, that we are fighting in enemy territory not in our own and that Japan cannot replace losses as rapidly as we can.

Nor is it to be assumed that we plan to win back the Far Pacific for the United Nations by an island-by-island attack. That would mean ten years of fighting. Instead, we shall take only certain strategic bases for our planes and submarines and put our fleet with its aircraft carriers and our land based planes within bombing range of Japan's only arsenals—those on her mainland.

Concurrently we must be getting more and more planes into China. More significant perhaps in some respects than what happened in the Solomons — though not played up in the headlines—was the announcement the other day that our army planes had bombed Hong Kong and have been operating even north of Peiping.

The big squeeze play for us is to bomb Japanese factories from Chinese bases some day while our fleet, inferior for the time being in numbers, draws the Japanese warships to be picked off in the southern areas of the Pacific and while our submarines gradually increase their activities in the China seas.

Japan has no such advantage as Germany has with internal rail lines to her occupied areas. Japan must transport by water to China and to all her naval and air bases every bit of the gasoline, bombs, shells and munitions. Time and resources are on our side as we overcome the factors of distance and build up our supply bases overseas.

In the end, the war against Japan will be won by the attrition that has already begun—by MacArthur's planes and men moving north from Australia and New Guinea, by naval and marine forces moving up north to strategic islands protected by our fleet, and by a host of Flying Fortresses operating from China. All will have had a part in the grand strategy of victory—but it will not be next week or next month or even next year.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Lafayette Square is more than 45 minutes from Broadway and (travel being what it is these days) goodness knows how far from Sunset boulevard, but Washington's Stage Door Canteen can take its bows right along with those in New York and Hollywood.

The service men who nightly pile into the old Belasco theatre don't have to kowtow to buddies who have visited the canteens in New York or the movie city. Maybe they can't match autograph for autograph if you stick strictly to stage and screen entertainment, but they can tie them or maybe top them if it's just a matter of collecting who's who.

Helen Hayes, a native Washingtonian, has been around so often, she's almost as well known to the boys who visit the Capital Stage Door Canteen as Mrs. Lawrence Langner, who is in charge. Ina Claire, also a native, has been around too, not to mention Dorothy Lamour, Lily Damita, the Lunts, John Boles, a couple of guys in uniform named Ezra Stone and Burgess Meredith, etcetera.

Alfred Lunt, who was around for a couple of weeks with his pre-Broadway appearance in "The Pirate," did just as good a job as menu advisor in Washington as he did in New York. I don't really believe there's any truth in that story that he examined the garbage to find out "what the boys didn't eat," but no buck private on KP ever did a better job of cleaning up.

Still the boys in the uniforms of any of the services have something that the lads who stick strictly to Hollywood and Broadway haven't got. For example Leon Henderson, the price man; Speaker Sam Rayburn; and Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Maritime Commission, washing dishes.

Every few nights Lieut. Charles Brendler brings in his Navy band; and other times, its one from the Coast Guard, Marines or one of the Army units. These crack musical units can't go as far away as Hollywood or even New York—they never can tell when the War or Navy Department will need them on the double quick.

Every night at each of the Stage Door Canteens, there's an "angel's table." The cover charge is pretty high, like $200 a plate and up. In Hollywood, there are producers, stars, writers and even associate producers to buy them. In New York, there's Wall Street, Park Avenue and Broadway.

But where else would you get an "angel" for the evening like Joseph Davies, who not only puts his spread on the table with the staggering cover charge, but autographs copies of his book "Mission to Moscow," for the boys.

The Belasco is just one "yoo-hoo" and a cigaret flip from the White House. There's been no indication yet from the White House that it is even cognizant of the hilarious noise that comes from the neighboring night club.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

PERSONALITY CANNOT BE APPLIED

To a young girl, a freshman at college who asks me how to acquire "personality" I can at least send one piece of advice: Forget that there is such a word in the language! It is not that this quality is unimportant—as a matter of fact it is at many times more important than any other asset that one can have, but like its counterpart, charm—it is not a tangible commodity to be applied as though it were a cosmetic.

Where to Send Presents?

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter's fiance is in the Coast Guard and we have come out here with my daughter to stay until she is married. Our home is far inland and it will be impossible for other members of our family and our friends to join us here, therefore, we are going to send out announcements only. I feel sure that many friends and relatives of both the bride and groom will want to send them wedding presents but how can we let them know where to send them if they get no notices until the announcements, and by that time we may all have gone elsewhere?

Answer: It seems to me the best thing to do is to write personal notes—the bride to her own friends, the groom to his friends, and you to old friends and members of the bridegroom's family, as well as of your own. Tell them that the wedding is to take place on such a day, and that they will be very welcome should it be possible for them to come. Tell them where you now are. Send these notes at once so that messages of good will or possibly their presents will arrive before the marriage. As a matter of fact it would not be improper to send out regular wedding invitations instead of announcements, from no matter what distance since, as I have written many times before, a wedding invitation means that "You will be welcome if you can come"; whereas an announcement merely means that a wedding has taken place to which (for no matter how good the reason) you were not invited.

Long Dresses and No Cars

Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell us whether it will be suitable for the girls to wear long dresses at the buffet supper before going to church for the rehearsal? We'll be walking or going on the bus because none of us have cars.

Answer: Since a wedding rehearsal is never a dress reheasal it will be proper to wear whatever is most practical.

Dear Mrs. Post: How should a letter to a Lieutenant be directed?

Answer: If he's a Second Lieutenant in the Army, 2nd is prefixed in his name. If he's a First Lieutenant, you address him as Lieutenant. If he is in the Navy, a Lieutenant, senior grade, is addressed as Lieutenant. If he is a junior grade, he is addressed Lieutenant (j. g.) John Smith.

Mrs. Post's two booklets, "The Etiquette of Weddings," and "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," really belong in every home. Send for them, enclosing ten cents in coins and a three-cent stamp for each booklet ordered. Address Mrs. Post, care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y.

Healthy Cork Oak Trees Grow in Southern States

Expansion of growing areas and large increases in plantings in 1942 will constitute an important advance toward national self-sufficiency in cork, hitherto largely imported from the western Mediterranean region, Dr. Giles B. Cooke, Baltimore, reported in the publication of the American Chemical society.

Projected plantings of 50,000 young cork trees in California this year compare with 21,000 set out in 1941 in California and Arizona combined. Domestic cork is equal to the Mediterranean product, and may be used interchangeably with the imported material, experiments on California cork show.

A survey of the southern states showed that large healthy cork oak trees were growing in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

Agricultural directors and forestry specialists in these states and Florida, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas extended co-operation. Already more than 800 young cork trees have been planted in sections of these states, and 1,000 more seedlings that developed late are being held for distribution in October.

Dutch Guiana History

In 1667 the Netherlands traded what is now New York for the South American jungle colony of Surinam (Netherlands, or Dutch, Guiana). Paramaribo became the colonial port to which the settlers shipped their African slaves for work on their vast sugar plantations. So cruel and hard was the life that the slaves rebelled in the early 1700s, a number escaping to the surrounding jungles. From there, out of reach of the white authorities, they waged guerrilla warfare against the colonists. After decades of intermittent struggle, featured on both sides by torture and massacres, a peace was concluded, and on the black man's terms. In accordance with the treaty, the bush tribes not only won the right to rule themselves without interference and to pay no taxes, but also secured an annual cash tribute from the Surinam government, payable to their head man.

Marbles Acquire Value

There is amusement for children of nearly all ages in such elemental manifestations as quick motions, bright colors, symmetry of form, smoothness and clashing of sounds. All these are supplied by marbles, and, therefore, it is quite natural that they should have become almost universally adopted as one of the playthings of childhood. We must not lose sight of the undeniable fact that the latter runs right on through youth, adolescence and into full maturity.

Consequently we might expect, as we do find, that marbles are an enjoyment through the entire age period—a toy for the nursery, dice for the "sidewalk and alley craps" of boyhood, articles for rival games in the sports of youth and manhood, and finally collectors' items.

Cardinal Presides At Special Mass

Pontifical Service Attended by 21,000 Persons

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP) — The might of the Roman Catholic Church in America for victory in the war effort was placed before the world with authority and great dignity yesterday by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, during a solemn pontifical Mass heard by 21,000 at Convention Hall.

Red-robed and red-hatted the cardinal stood at the microphones which carried his voice around the world and warned Americans of the fate they face if the Axis wins.

"If we lose the war this land will be the choice prize of despoilers," he said in a voice that trembled with emotion. "It will be pounced upon by vultures which will devour it to the bone.

"We shall have the points of bayonets at our throats and the muzzles of muskets pressed against our heads. If one wishes to picture our fate in case of defeat he has only to look at what has taken place in the conquered parts of Europe * * *. We must, we will win the victory," he said.

The Mass was offered for victory, a lasting peace and for the repose of the souls of war victims. Speaking by short wave to the American men under arms the cardinal added: "We pray that in every battle with our enemies God's protecting hand may be stretched over you."

A message from President Roosevelt and a sermon by Auxiliary Bishop Hugh A. Lamb, of Philadelphia, also were broadcast. The President's message urged that in these days of crises "we must all unite in labor and in prayer to achieve victory and to bring back to the world an international order dominated by true Christian principles."

Searching Party Finds Lester Bailey's Body

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP) Some days ago in his ancient Baileytown home, the Old Man of Bear Mountain wrote this note:

"I have gone to the fields."

Lester Bailey, 72—Old Man Bailey to the hundreds who knew him —put the note on a table, strapped on his ancient two-barrel shotgun and set out with his dog, Tinker, for a night's 'coon hunting.

It was old man Bailey's last journey into the fields that had known him all his life.

A searching party found his dead yesterday.

But in dying, Old Man Bailey added one final legend of these hills to the countless ones that had aged with him . . .

A 16-pound raccoon, killed by his gun, was slung over his body.

Orange County Coroner Frank Cromwell said Old Man apparently died of heart disease. The party had searched since Thursday after Bailey's son, Robert, reported him missing.

The dog was found two days ago —emaciated and exhausted.

Neighborhood Affair

Albion, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—The campaign for Orleans county judge and surrogate which ends tomorrow has been pretty much of a neighborhood affair with the Republican and Democratic candidates for office living next door to each other. Their campaign managers also are next door neighbors. All four live within a block of each other. Running for election is Democratic Judge Daniel W. Hanley, Jr., appointed to the post last January by Governor Lehman. His Republican opponent is Charles G. Signor, whose father, the late Isaac Signor, held the office 19 years. They have lived next to each other for 22 years. Farther down the street lives Herbert T. Reed, Republican county chairman and Signor's law partner. Next door to him resides M. Murray Dailey, Democratic county chairman, who is handling Hanley's campaign.

25th Anniversary Of the Balfour Declaration Noted

Kingston, N. Y.

Editor of The Freeman:

On the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, I commend the following thoughts to your readers:

The last 25 years have seen the Balfour Declaration buffeted about in the storm of political rivalries, chicaneries and racial animosities. The Declaration has suffered particularly rough treatment in the treacherous currents of appeasement. So true is all this that its original intent has been almost blotted out by a series of interpretations, and the last of them, the notorious White Paper of 1939, has to all intents and purposes abrogated it.

Twenty-five years have now elapsed since the Balfour Declaration was issued and Jewish communities throughout America are observing the anniversary. The question may well be asked: Is it proper, in view of the vicissitudes that have befallen this document, to celebrate its birth?

Our answer to that question is emphatic "Yes!" In spite of everything, the Balfour Declaration remains a historic document of the first order. It marked the official recognition by a great power of "The historic connection of the Jewish people with Palestine and the reasons for reconstituting the Jewish National Home." It rallied to the support of the great project the other civilized nations of the world, among them the United States of America. What is equally important, it rallied to its support a new stream of the energy, the idealism, and the resources of the Jewish people. It brought wave after wave of Jewish immigration into Palestine, led by a vanguard of pioneers whose record would shine brightly in the history of any people. It served, and it still serves, as the most important point of reference in the claims of the Jewish people to the recognition by the world of its right to a national home of its own in the land that is identified with its pristine greatness.

It is not the habit of history, any more than it is the habit of any thing else in nature, to march in a straight line. A river whose general course is toward the east, will sometimes veer to the north or south. It may sometimes appear to go back on itself. Nevertheless, its general course will continue towards the east. The checkered history of the restoration of the Second Jewish Commonwealth which began with Ezra and Nehemiah will do much to illuminate the course of the restoration of the Third Jewish Commonwealth.

The world can join heartily in the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, and trust that Jewish communities throughout the world, in the present hour that is so tragically dark for many of them, will find in the observance of this anniversary an augury of the brighter future that will come.

A special program commemorating the occasion will be broadcast tonight over station WKNY at 7:15.

Sincerely yours,
ABRAHAM STREIFER
President, Kingston Zionist District

LaGuardia Has Own Coffee-Making Recipe

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Busy Mayor La Guardia has barged into the kitchen again—now with his own recipe for brewing coffee.

In his weekly broadcast yesterday the mayor, whose latest utterances in matters culinary pertained to meat rationing, advised the little woman to (A) stow away her modern percolator for the duration, (B) dust off the old-fashioned coffee pot, and (C) proceed as follows:

"Just take a spoonful (of coffee) to a cup—that's pretty strong —and then brew it.

"Let it come to a boil for a very short time, then set it aside and let it settle and also strain the coffee in serving it.

"I wouldn't throw the grounds away if anyone in the family is accustomed to having coffee for their midday or evening meal; just adding a sprinkle on the top of the old grounds will make a very good cup of coffee for the evening."

La Guardia recalled an old saw of the frontier housewives, "Never wash your coffee pot"—but advised against it. He said his mother back in Arizona had rejected it, despite the theory that flavor accumulated and grew richer with successive brewings.

He urged that the new coffee regulations be accepted with order and intelligence, asserting:

"Please don't be silly about this and start chiseling and buying more coffee than you need. A great many people have done that, and that just isn't nice, it isn't patriotic and it shouldn't be done."

Ecuador's Santa Elena Peninsula Has U. S. Base

Uncle Sam's site for a new base in South America, on Ecuador's Santa Elena peninsula, is in a dry, tropical, lowland region of petroleum production and cattle grazing.

The Santa Elena peninsula, near the southern end of Ecuador's coast line, is the Republic's farthest projection westward into the Pacific ocean. Almost due west of the peninsula's tip, 600 miles off shore, are the Galapagos islands, where another base site was granted to the United States by Ecuador, in the same agreement.

La Libertad, port town on the north shore of Santa Elena peninsula is 785 air miles south and slightly west of the Panama canal, across the Gulf of Panama. It is approximately a hundred miles by water and 75 miles by rail west of Ecuador's principal port, Guayaquil, a city of 150,000 people located 40 miles inland on the chocolate-brown waters of the Guayas river. Most of Ecuador's sea-borne trade to Panama and to the West coast of North America must round the peninsula before turning north.

The tip of Santa Elena peninsula is 160 miles south of the Equator. In that short distance Ecuador's coast changes from a forest region of abundant rain to a comparatively dry, desert area with only a scattering of low shrubs. The mean annual temperature on the peninsula is about 83 degrees Fahrenheit. The climate is pleasant during the dry months from June to December, but humid and enervating during the first half of the year. Whereas, Negroes thrive in the moist coastal forests to the north, Indians prove to be better fitted for life on the dry reaches of the peninsula.

$30,000,000 Spent for Recreation by U. S. Cities

Recreation needs for war industry workers as well as service men, and conditioning programs for civilian defense workers contributed in 1941 to an expanded national recreation program costing cities more than $30,000,000.

Although this expenditure did not approach the peak outlay of pre-depression days, it was nearly $1,000,000 more than was spent in 1940, according to figures submitted by 1,164 cities to the National Recreation association, source of the city manager association's information.

Expenditures for the current year may rise equally high or higher, the association said, since tire and gas rationing are providing new reasons for programs for stay-at-homes.

Popular in municipal recreation programs were picnicking and gardening, reported by an increasing number of cities. Basketball, bowling-on-the-green, football, boating, swimming, skiing and first aid classes are other activities listed as favorites in recreation programs.

Nearly 18 per cent—or 207—of the cities offered special services for men in uniform last year, while 190 cities provided special services for war industry workers. Among these services were evening-hour programs and clubs for families of workers new to the city. In addition, 300 or more recreation agencies said they had served large numbers of service men through their regular facilities.

Such Men As . . .

Some of the principal arguments against United States membership in the League were advanced by such men as Senator Borah, Senator Johnson and the late Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. The arguments were that it has been since its earliest history the policy of the United States to avoid foreign entanglements; that the proper province of the United States is the Western hemisphere, and that any interest of the United States with the Eastern hemisphere, other than commercial, is non-existent; that the United States is a sovereign Nation and that adhesion to the League covenant delegates a part of the sovereignty to a state established in a foreign country and composed of foreign nations.

Barbados' Fine Climate

Healthful climate has in fact so encouraged native black population as to make Barbados one of the world's most heavily peopled areas of its size. Almost 200,000 people live on its 166 square miles. The density, nearly 1,200 people per square mile, is comparable to that of China's most crowded provinces. Labor is cheap and mass production methods have been purposely withheld from the island's great sugar industry because they would cause unemployment and starvation. Women outnumber men largely because thousands of rugged Barbados males have moved to less crowded neighboring islands for employment.

Hemp Substitute

O. R. Winchester of Boynton, Fla., has expressed a willingness to start growing sansevieria as a substitute for hemp in rope making until large-scale operations could be started with federal assistance.

Under the proposal 100,000 mature plants, sufficient to cover ten acres, would be set out at once for study and for production of fiber for experimental purposes. Subsequent commercial planting would be on a tract of 250 acres of improved land now available.

Kingston 'Spotter' Service Will Hold Educational Drive

To draw its volunteer "spotter" organization of the Aircraft Warning Service into a closed relation with the public at large, officers of the local Observation Post located on the roof of the Governor Clinton Hotel have readily accepted a plan presented by the A.W.S. public relations officer of Ulster county. The plan calls for school groups headed by teachers or by representatives appointed by a school principal, organizations, both religious and fraternal, to be invited by appointment, on specified dates, to witness the actual functioning of the "spotter" service.

Such groups, limited in numbers, will be taken in charge of a "spotter-guide" qualified to explain the purpose of the Post and group guests will have an opportunity to enter the observation post proper and observe the "spotters" on duty at actual work. Guests will be allowed to use any movable equipment now employed by "spotters" in order to gain a better knowledge and understanding of the service rendered by the Post for both the community and the United States Army—under whose direction these posts function.

The New York Air Wing of the First Fighter Command has 10,000 observation posts between Florida and Maine. Eighteen such posts are located in Ulster county with 1,500 men and women volunteer "spotters" manning these posts on a 24-hour basis. Day or night, in scorching heat or biting frost these watchers of our skylanes keep vigil.

Sam N. Mann, chief observer, Associate Chief Observers Mrs. George D. Logan, Robert Rhinehart and Daniel W. Benton, are the officers in charge of Kingston's Observation Post.

Local Coffee Sales Will Be Frozen

November 21 Is Deadline; O.P.A. Is Acting Under W.P.B.'s Orders

All sales of coffee at retail in Kingston will be frozen at midnight, November 21, for the week before rationing starts, but householders who this week have attempted to purchase coffee in the local stores have either been unable to obtain any, or have been allowed a half pound to a pound with their order.

The Office of Price Administration has been directed by the War Production Board to undertake the rationing of coffee after it became apparent that the available coffee supply in retail stores—65 per cent of normal—was insufficient to meet consumer demand.

This, according to the O.P.A., was largely due to excessive buying by consumers. The 35% curtailment of deliveries to retail stores resulted from a W.P.B. limitation order requiring restriction of sales from roaster to wholesaler to retailer, which resulted in turn from lack of ships to bring coffee in normal quantities from Central and South America, according to the O.P.A.

With the sale of coffee frozen at midnight November 21, for the week before rationing starts, in order to permit retailers to stock their shelves for the beginning of rationed sales, every person in the country, 15 years old or over, will be entitled to a ration of one pound of coffee each five weeks.

Consumers will get their first coffee ration by surrendering the last stamp of their War Ration Book No. 1, the book now used only for sugar rations. Subsequent rations of coffee will be on coupons taken in sequence toward the center of the book. Specifically, the stamp numbers are 28 down to 19. Use of the book for sugar will continue exactly as in the past. Those who did not obtain War Ration Book No. 1 may get it from their local War Price and Ration Boards now.

Gas May Be Cut

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—Householders were warned today that because of the demands of war plants, coupled with the shortage of oil and coal, domestic consumption of gas must be sharply curtailed this winter. The War Production Board said last night that the needs of war industries was reducing the reserve margins of many gas plants "to a point where actual shortages may occur during cold weather unless domestic consumption is reduced."

LaGuardia Asks Phone Company Assist Campaign

New York, Nov. 2-(AP)- Mayor La Guardia has called upon the New York Telephone Company for "more cooperation" in the current campaign against gambling in the city.

In his weekly radio talk yesterday, La Guardia expressed doubt that the "complicated telephone service set-ups" used by bookmakers could operate without the company's knowledge, asserting:

"The more I get into this thing, the more I wonder if it is possible for such vast, expensive, complicated telephone service set ups as have been found operating under these tinhorns and gamblers and criminals and thieves to be operating without the knowledge of the New York telephone company.

"Just think, telephone numbers are falsely listed. They have a Manhattan number when the call is shifted to a den or hideout in New Jersey. Now the telephone company does the listing, the telephone company installs the instruments in these hideouts in Jersey, and they must also have additional bookkeeping in making extra charges to the tinhorns' accounts.

"Now, Mr. New York Telephone Company, I've been very nice about this, but I want more cooperation and I'll take it up not only with your board of directors but with all of your stockholders, because there are many decent men and women stockholders of the New York Telephone Company or its Parent Company, who do not want to be partners or associates of the tinhorns and the thieves and the gamblers who are breaking up homes and stealing the food from the mouths of our little children."

In a previous broadcast, La Guardia referred to such listings conceding that it was proper in many cases of legitimate business concerns situated outside of New York State, and also that the telephone company was prompt in discontinuing service in instances where evidence was submitted to show it was being used illegally.

Canada Freezes More Industries

Permits Become Necessary to Open New Business

Ottawa, Nov. 2 (AP)—Canada's war economy slipped into a higher gear today and most Canadians felt the resulting change as a series of freezing orders and restrictions went into effect with the opening of business.

Perhaps the most sweeping alteration in Canadian business life was contained in the order by the Board of Prices freezing a variety of business establishments at their present status and forbidding the starting of new businesses except by permit. The creation of new selling outlets, stocking of lines of goods not already handled and moving to larger premises is prohibited except by permit.

The order applies to manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and ten types of service businesses such as undertaking and embalming, laundering, hairdressing and plumbing and heating.

Palestine May Be Home for Jews

Willkie Suggests Post-War 'Home for European Jews'

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie says Palestine will have to be opened to the homeless Jews of central and eastern Europe who survive the war and "the extent of that emigration must be measured by the needs of the Jewish people."

In a telegram to a mass meeting observing the 25th anniversary of the Balfour declaration by England, Willkie said yesterday that the "case" of the Jews for a national home "has always rested upon historic rights and international law."

"Hitler's program of extermination of the Jewish people," the message continued, "has made it a case for the conscience of mankind. . . .

"While one cannot foresee the exact organization which will follow this war, the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine in fulfillment of the promise contained in the Balfour declaration must find its rightful place in the new world order of tomorrow."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D.-Utah), addressing the meeting, asked for "the recognition of the fighting Jews of Palestine as our allies" and declared "we seek the establishment of a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine as one of our war aims and peace aims."

Three Are Winners At City's Party

Miss Mackey, Charles Aleuz and Charles Crispell Get Costume Prizes

Sandra Mackey, Charles Crispell and Charles Aleuz were the winners in the costume judging at the Halloween party held Saturday evening in the Municipal Auditorium under the auspices of the city's recreation department and Kingston Post of the American Legion. The party was one of the most successful held, and was attended by some 3,000 persons, both young and old.

Before the party started, however, groups of children in costume gathered for the two big parades. The uptown parade formed at Academy Green and marched to the auditorium headed by the Kingston High School Band, while the downtown groups gathered in front of St. Mary's School and marched to the auditorium headed by the Sons of the Legion Drum Corps.

Many persons lined the sidewalks to watch the parades.

At the auditorium a most interesting program was arranged and the festivities opened with all of the children in costume forming a grand march around the auditorium, and then several stunts were staged and community singing followed led by Sidney Lutzin, recreation director, with Edward Ward at the piano.

Fred L. Van Deusen, Kingston's leading magician, entertained with a bagful of new tricks, which was followed by the costume judging. The judges were Secretary Burt Tandy of the Y. M. C. A., Nelson Snyder of the American Legion and Miss Dorothy Lowe, Girl Reserves secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

This year there were three classes. The winner of the patriotic class group was little Sandra Mackey; Charles Crispell as a hobo was the winner in the class of children under 16 years of age, while Charles Aleuz, also as a hobo, was the winner in the adult group.

Following the judging and the awarding of the prizes which had been donated by the 40 & 8, eight reels of movies were shown by Henry Millonig, Jr.

It was about 11 o'clock that night when the party broke up, with all present declaring it was one of the most enjoyable parties since the affair had been made an annual event in the city.

Egg-Drying Plants Put Out 200 Million Pounds

One egg out of every seven produced in 1942 will go to a drying plant to be made into egg powder for use by United States armed forces on far-flung battle fronts, and by the Allies.

Proper marketing practices are vital to the success of the egg production program in 1942 designed to meet wartime requirements.

Producing eggs means a lot more than giving hens all they will eat and leaving the rest to chance. Eggs produced this year to supply needs during the present emergency must be good eggs when they leave the farm and good ones when they reach the consumer.

About two-thirds of the 1942 goal of 4½ billion dozens has been reached. The remaining one-third, or about 1½ billion dozen eggs, stands between success or failure of the program.

Egg drying plants are called upon to produce 200 million pounds of eggs, which means the use of at least 600 million dozen eggs. In addition, there are large demands for fresh shell eggs by the armed forces stationed in the country.

Production of quality eggs begins with producing infertile eggs, keeping nests clean, collecting eggs at least three times daily and cooling them properly, packing in clean containers, and marketing frequently. Infertile eggs keep best under all conditions and are most desirable for food purposes.

Wilson's 14 Points

The famous 14 points assailed by Hitler were first outlined to congress by President Wilson in January, 1918. These points which Wilson believed necessary to a post-war settlement were, briefly: 1. Open treaties through open international diplomacy. 2. Freedom of the seas. 3. Free international trade. 4. Disarmament. 5. Impartial adjustment of colonial claims. 6. Evacuation of Russian territory. 7. Evacuation of Belgium. 8. Evacuation of French territory and return of Alsace-Lorraine to France. 9. Readjustment of Italian frontiers. 10. Autonomy for Austria and Hungary. 11. Evacuation of Rumania, Serbia, and Montenegro and security for Balkan states. 12. Sovereignty for Turkey along lines of nationality. 13. An independent Poland. 14. Formation of a "general association of nations."

How 'Maverick' Began

Soon after the Mexican war, Samuel A. Maverick began locating land and raising cattle. Eventually he owned more land and had more cattle on the free public range than anyone else in Texas. In 1861 most of the cowboys of the region left to enter the Civil war, and Maverick's cattle were left to run wild. When the war ended there were tens of thousands of unbranded animals, and in the round-ups that followed Maverick was the greatest claimant of unmarked cattle. So often was it said of stock that "these are Maverick's" that eventually all strayed calves and other unbranded cattle came to be referred to as mavericks.

Gas and electricity are rationed in unoccupied France to about half the normal amount.

Gun Accidentally Goes Off but Injures No One

A gun accidentally went off Sunday afternoon, but fortunately no one was wounded when it discharged, according to a report made to the police department by Harry Van Wagenen of 198 Tremper avenue.

Mr. Van Wagenen reported to the police that day that he had gone to his bedroom where he kept his gun. He said it was never loaded when in the house, and that he kept the shells in a trunk.

He saw the weapon was cocked when he picked it up and as he let down the hammer there was a crash. The "empty" gun discharged a load of No. 5 shot through the bedroom window, some of which was imbedded in the side of the adjoining house.

Mr. Van Wagenen said he later made a further investigation and his 10-year-old son informed him that he had placed a shell in the gun.

Saugerties Man Held For Not Having License

Donald Boura of Saugerties, driver of the car which was involved in a collision with a truck near the 9-W Skating Rink on the Kingston-Saugerties road Friday night, was arrested by Sergeant James J. Cunningham and Trooper Walter Keefe Sunday on a charge of operating a car without a license. Before Justice Frank Hughes of Saugerties a plea of guilty was entered and a $10 fine paid.

Boura and Leonard Freligh of Saugerties were riding in the car of Jacob Schneider near the rink about 11 o'clock Friday night when the car and a tractor-trailer collided. Both were injured. Boura was treated at the Kingston Hospital and discharged Saturday. Carlton Jenkins of Long Beach, N. Y., driver of the truck, was also injured and treated at the hospital.

President's Decision Might Alter Americans' Eating

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—Eating habits of Americans civilians for the duration of the war may be determined largely by the decision President Roosevelt makes on a prosposal that he appoint a food administrator to control production and consumption.

The proposal, advanced by war production board chairman Donald M. Nelson, reflects sharp and fundamental differences within the government over war food requirements and the possibility of further shortages.

At the bottom of these differences is the question of how much manpower, machinery, transportation, and other facilities should be devoted to food production.

On the one hand are those—including Secretary of Agriculture Wickard—who believes that food production should be maintained at as near present record levels as possible in order that civilians as well as the United Nations fighting forces may have well-balanced diets.

On the other are those—including some war production board officials and military authorities—who believe that the country cannot meet both its military manpower and material needs and still maintain agricultural production at anywhere near present levels.

This latter group contends that, in the interest of a quick and successful conclusion of the war, food production should be stripped largely to cereals, potatoes, and vegetable oil crops for civilians. Production of meats, dairy and poultry products and vegetables, they believe, should be reduced to a level deemed necessary to provide military and lend-lease requirements and allow civilians a considerably smaller quantity than is now made available for them.

Another issue has been allocation of materials for farm machinery. The W.P.B. will allow farmers to get only 23 per cent as much machinery as they bought in 1940. Wickard believes this is far too small.

Causing other disagreements is the matter of controlling existing food supplies. Wickard is known to favor immediate allocation or rationing for all major classes of food to make present supplies last as long as possible and to prevent hoarding. As yet, the W.P.B. and the office of price administration, agencies responsible for rationing, have shown little inclination to agree.

A food administrator would have to deal with these differences of views, take stock of needs and supplies, determine production possibilities under varying conditions, decide how much productive ability could be spared for food, and then develop a plan in accordance. Such a plan might involve sharp changes in civilian eating.

Neighbor Gives Testimony Based On Wergin Story

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP)—A neighbor of Otto Wergin, one of six persons on trial on treason charges, testified today that Wergin told her in 1939 he would want Germany to win in a war with the United States, and his American citizenship papers "mean nothing more to me than to throw in the gutter."

Mrs. Tim Kelly, tall, blonde and matronly, told a Federal Court jury Wergin declared in the fall of 1939 shortly after Britain and Germany went to war:

"If the United States were at war with Germany our population might be wiped out in two weeks."

Richard Finn, assistant United States district attorney, asked Mrs. Kelly if she ever did anything about the remarks of Wergin and his wife, Kate, also a defendant.

"Yes," she replied, "I reported them to the F. B. I. in 1939."

The Wergins are friends of Hans and Erna Haupt, parents of Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the six Nazi saboteurs who landed from Germany by submarine in June and were executed after trial by a military commission.

The Wergins, Haupts and Walter and Lucille Froehling, aunt and uncle of Herbert, are charged with committing treason by aiding and assisting young Haupt in his plot of destruction of United States war industries.

Mrs. Kelly related she lived in the same apartment building with the Wergins from 1936 through 1939. She told of accompanying them to a German motion picture program and of seeing German periodicals in their home.

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Ethel S. Epstein, wife of the Democratic candidate for state attorney general, announced in a statement issued at Democratic headquarters today that she had been "fired" from her post as Mayor La Guardia's labor secretary. Mrs. Epstein released an exchange of letters with the mayor and indicated, in the face of the mayor's disclaimer, that she had been discharged because of her campaign on behalf of her husband, Henry Epstein. Epstein was not endorsed by the American Labor party, of which Mayor La Guardia is an enrolled member.

State Police Take Carbondale Men For Thefts of Tires

Theft of automobile tires which have been reported from various places between Middletown and Binghamton apparently have been explained by the arrest of two Carbondale, Pa., men by state police. Fourteen garages had been reported broken into and tires stolen. The burglaries were effected during the hours the garages were closed when thieves would enter the places and strip tires from new cars which had been frozen in the hands of dealers.

Friday morning while Troopers Rock and Viscocil were secreted in a garage at Afton, Chenango county, two men entered the premises about 3 o'clock. The troopers arrested the men and later identified them as Joseph Sciczina, Carbondale gas station operator and Joseph Malinowski also of Carbondale. The troopers charged the pair with burglary and held them for grand jury action.

Also working on the case were Trooper Edward Croswell of the local B. C. I. and Trooper Branigan. Trooper Croswell said the men caught in the operation of robbing the garage at Afton had three former convictions against them. Their plan was to drive from their home town to a distant point by car and then enter a garage, remove the tires and return home to sell the tires. The usual price was $35 per tire. The number of tires taken from the fourteen garages which have reported losses is not known but from one of the garages reporting losses 19 tires were taken at one time.

Women War Workers Tops For Detailed Operations

Fidelity to detail is a characteristic of American women which is making them more important every day to the nation's industrial war front, says Dr. F. Theodore Struck, director of industrial education at the Pennsylvania State college.

Dr. Struck, who has made a study of vocational training for war production, believes that this quality in women is spurring the efforts of American industry where women can replace men in war plants.

"Women are being absorbed by industry more rapidly now than at a comparative period in the first World war and on the whole, this rapid induction reflects a deep and abiding concern for the welfare of the country," he said.

Millions of women, according to the college expert, are presently engaged in highly important war work, such as making munitions, loading bags of powder, assembling radios for aircraft, making and repairing gas masks, and inspecting manufactured parts and products.

Invaluable to the war effort because of their health, stamina, courage, and devotion, women are especially essential in checking minute parts. They are sometimes better fitted than men in concentrating on highly detailed and repetitious work, according to Dr. Struck.

As inspectors in plants, checking intricate parts of machinery and instruments up to two-millionths of an inch, women have proved their ability, Dr. Struck pointed out. He added that "their desire to take responsibility and do their part" is strengthening Uncle Sam's supply lines.

Having Correct Shoes Will Prevent Distress

Maybe the fellow with a bad temper is that way because his feet hurt. At any rate, it pays to study your feet—how to use them and how to care for them. Ills of the feet may be caused by wearing shoes which do not fit.

Shoes should be selected with the utmost care. Be sure you get the pair which fits comfortably and answers your needs. Try on the shoes and walk around in them to see whether they slide here or pinch or rub there. Don't buy by size alone. Your feet may require different sizes for different types. The shoes should conform to the natural shape of the foot. They should have a straight inner line, following the outline of the normal foot.

Be sure that your toes don't touch the end of the shoe and that there is no pressure on top. The great joint should come where the sole shape has the most pronounced curve. Test this by raising the heel to see whether the bend of the sole comes directly under the big joint of the big toe. The seam should not come over the great toe joint.

The shoe should fit snugly about the heel without binding, or slipping up and down or forward and back. That way lie blisters and holes in your stockings. Another point—the heel should be low and broad enough for a good support. Nature intended that man should walk on both the heel and ball of the foot.

Big Grid Games Ahead As College Teams Open Last Month of Season

Conference Titles More Settled After Week's Upsets; Irish Play Army Saturday

New York, Nov. 2 (AP) — With virtually all the conference pictures more clearly defined after last week's slam-bang program, the nation's football teams moved into the final month of the campaign today, many of them with stiff assignments dead ahead.

Although the coming week-end can't hope to produce anything as exciting as the past one, when such teams as Ohio State, Alabama, Army, Syracuse, Texas Christian and Detroit were bounced out of the undefeated ranks, there still will be enough action to go around.

Wisconsin in Front

In the western conference, Wisconsin stands alone at the front of the title chase after dumping Ohio State, 17-7, and the Badgers can protect that lead by taking their next three games, the first of them with Iowa next Saturday. Iowa's 13-6 triumph over Purdue was its second in three conference starts.

Ohio State, dropped to second place, has a non-conference date with Pitt this week and Purdue also steps out of the loop to play the Great Lakes Sailors, who blanked Missouri, 17-0.

After handing Illinois its first conference setback, 28-14, Michigan takes on Harvard in an intersectional duel. Illinois tangles with Northwestern and Minnesota, 19-7 conqueror of Northwestern, meets Indiana in conference play.

Army's 19-0 loss to Pennsylvania took a little of the edge off this week's tussle between the cadets and Notre Dame at New York's Yankee Stadium, but the Irish prepared for the classic by sinking Navy, 9-0. Penn and Navy get together at Philadelphia at the same time.

Boston College, which remained unbeaten and untied by swamping Georgetown, 47-0, catches Temple, while other eastern headliners send Yale against Cornell, Princeton against Dartmouth and Penn State against Syracuse. Fordham has an intersectional date with Louisiana State.

Georgia, which looms as the best in the south if not in the entire country after stopping previously unbeaten Alabama, 21-10, meets another but weaker southeastern conference opponent, Florida.

Alabama tangles with South Carolina and Maryland, 13-0 winner over Florida, meets Duke in a southern loop headliner. Georgia Tech, still unbeaten and untied after stopping Duke, 26-7, takes on Kentucky with visions of another southeastern conference triumph.

Tulane finally won two games in a row by tripping Vanderbilt, 28-21, and will try to make it three against Mississippi State, a southeastern foe. Mississippi plays Vanderbilt and Auburn tackles the Georgia Pre-flight Club.

With Texas Christian out of the way, Baylor and Texas collide headon with the southwest conference lead and perhaps the title at stake. Baylor knocked T.C.U. out of the unbeaten ranks, 10-7, while Texas handled southern Methodist, 21-7.

South-West Games

S.M.U. meets Texas A. and M., which crushed Arkansas, 41-0, and Arkansas tangles with Rice, 19-7 victor over Texas Tech, in other conference frays. T.C.U. and Texas Tech have a non-conference date.

In the Pacific coast conference, first-place U.S.L.A. meets Oregon in quest of league victory number four. U.C.L.A. trounced Stanford, 20-7 Sathurday while Oregon lost to California, 20-0. California plays southern California, which rested Saturday.

Stanford moves in against Washington, 13-0 conqueror of Oregon State, which meets Montana. Washington State plays Michigan State in an intersectional duel.

Nebraska and Missouri, still unbeaten in big six play, will go a long way toward deciding the conference title when they collide Saturday. Oklahoma plays Kansas State in another loop tilt.

Tulsa, unbeaten, untied and unscored on, meets Oklahoma A. and M. with the Missouri valley championship at stake.

BOWLING NEWS

Mixed Canine League

Johnny Ferraro's sensational bowling of late continued at the Central Recreation alleys Sunday night in the Mixed Canine League when he sparked his unstoppable Bull Dogs to three more wins. This time the unfortunate opponent happened to be the Great Danes.

Ferraro, who posted some spectacular scores this past week in the Central Major League, and who has been doing more great kegling in the Sunday night loop, anchored away last night with a 654 triple on marks of 235, 233 and 186. Another 700 series might have been in the offing had the third game been a little higher. However, there are plenty of bowlers who will settle for any of Johnny's scores.

Ferraro was the entire show against the Great Danes. F. Cirone had a 447 series while Rose Schatzel hit 441. Neither one of these two bowlers hit their usual strides last night. Slover had a 495 for the Danes.

George Caster of the Greyhounds wacked that team into higher brackets last night as he blasted out a 217 single and 623 triple. His other scores were 203 and 203. Ray Otto had 521. Joe Marks had a 455 string.

Petersen Rolls 256

The Terriers remained in fourth place as they took two games from the Police Dogs, last place team. It was young Larry Petersen, Jr., who did the trick, however, with his sizzling 256 single and 613 triple. Larry also rolled 169 and 188. Evelyn Provenzano had a 512 series. Bill Evans' 158, 255 and 140 moulded into a 553 triple.

The final match found the Whippets, second place team, capturing two games from the Spaniels, third place club. Lacey Burger's 187 single and 520 triple paced the winners. Van Alstyne had 182 and 479 for the losers.

DOG POSTMAN PASSES

"Toby, the dog postman," is gone, and grieving postal employes at Toowong, Australia, have erected a concrete slab in memory of his 10 years of service. For a decade he arrived at the post office at 7:30 a. m. daily to accompany a postman on a round. Nor would he pay attention to anyone without a postman's whistle.

Newburgh Upsets Port 7-0 to Give Middies Good Chance for 1942 Pennant

Veteran baseball men refer to Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sox as the "hitless wonders." After due restraint and some very conclusive hopes, there's no other title to the present High School football machine except the "scoreless wonders."

Saturday afternoon the Maroons did it again. This time Johnny Bateman's Middletown club walloped Kingston by 39 to 0, the secong 39 to 0 pasting the locals have suffered this year. Kingston was in the ball game one period, the first, when it held the Middies scoreless.

Hopes Glimmer, Fade

Kingston, which has now gone through four straight ball games without a score, started the season off with 24 points. That two dozen of markers remain as the lone offensive thrusts the Maroons have mustered together all year. Game after game critics and followers alike hoped for a score. After last week's inspiring first half showing against Poughkeepsie, fans thought that the team might do a little better against Middletown Saturday. However, it all crumbled and once again, for the fourth time this year, the once-proud Kingston High School sauntered off the gridiron with another inglorious defeat on their already unbelievably poor record for the 1942 campaign.

Newburgh Upsets Port

While the Middies were blasting the Maroons around Wilson Field in Middletown Saturday afternoon, Bill Elder's Newburgh Free Academy eleven scored the biggest upset of the DUSO League season by defeating Port Jervis 7 to 0 and thereby giving the Port club a stunning blow for its league hopes. Before this game Port was undefeated, untied and unscored upon. Coupled with the Kingston win and Port's defeat, Middletown is now assured of no worse than a tie for the 1942 championship.

After holding the powerful Middies scoreless in the first period of play, Kingston's defense crumbled under the fierce attacks offered by Bateman's gridders. In the second period Middletown started to move. Johnny Newman went over on a short plunge for the first score.

Later in the same session Bob Diaz heaved passes to Burton for two more touchdowns. Burton caught one of the aerials on the one-yard line and stepped over while the other was a pass for about 30 yards to Burton who grabbed it in the end zone.

Middie Drives in Third

Again in the third session Middletown had its ground gainers and passing attacks hitting on all fours and quickly resumed its scoring activities for the day. Two sustained drives of 65 yards and 50 yards wound up in two more touchdowns. Bill Vernooy plunged over the chalklines for the first score from the two-foot line. Following up the 50-yard drive Diaz galloped over from the three. After running wild in the second and third periods, Middletown took it easy in the final session. Only one score was registered when Newman dashed over from Kingston's four to make it 30 to 0. It was his second T. D. of the afternoon.

While the Middies repeatedly tore into Kingston's stubborn but inefficient defenses, the Maroons also were helpless in doing any gaining. For the better part of the game the play was all in Kingston's territory. The Maroons played the game without Will Harrell, quarterback. Ted Conwicke's plan to use Lee Boice in the line fizzled when Harrell was unable to play.

Burton, big Middletown end, was the potent star of the game with his pass-catching activities all afternoon. He and Diaz offered the most consistent drives against Kingston. Jiggs McLaughlin and Bobby Clark played well for the Maroons.

Isbell's Great Arm Helps Shatter Old Pro Grid Marks

Green Bay Artist Throws Five T.D. Passes as Packers Rout Cards by 55-24 Score

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP)—The magic wand of football, Cecil Isbell's arm, has become the most overworked weapon in the National Football League, throwing the Green Bay Packers to victory and the record books out the window.

Isbell shook five touchdown passes from his sleeve yesterday as the Packers crushed the Chicago Cardinals 55 to 24. Beaten only by the Bears, the Green Bay eleven is gathering momentum for its second, and showdown meeting with the national champions November 15 in Chicago.

Five records were set and two others equaled in the Packer-Cardinal game:

1. Isbell completed 10 to 21 passes for 333 yards, surpassing Davey O'Brien's gain of 316 in 1940.
2. Green Bay picked up 427 yards through the air, topping the Chicago Bears' mark of 376 last year—made also against the Cardinals.
3. The scoring total, 55-24—79, was the highest in National Football League history.
4. Don Hutson placekicked six extra points, breaking the old record of five in a single game held by three different players.
5. The game's 11 touchdowns eclipsed the 1934 mark of 10 made in the Philadelphia-Cincinnati game.
6. Isbell's five touchdown pitches equaled the record held by Ray Buivid of the Bears since 1937. Buivid's scoring shots also were against the Cards.
7. Hutson's three catches of touchdown passes raised his season's ante to 10, which drew him even with his 1941 league record—and he has five games yet to go.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home

AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

How To Obtain Heating Satisfaction

Another heating season will soon be upon us. When tending to the furnace, let us resolve not to follow those habits which waste money, coal, and cause inconvenience and discomfort.

There are ten such bad habits which every homeowner would do well to avoid:

1. Excessive shaking of the grates: A gentle shaking will serve the same purpose and save fuel. Shake only until the first red glow appears in the ashpit, not until live pieces of coal drop through the grate.
2. Using ashes for banking purposes: The only place for ashes is in the ashpit—with the exception of a thin layer upon the grates. If you fire ashes on top of live coals, you can expect clinker trouble and poor heat.
3. Burning rubbish or garbage in your furnace: Your furnace was built to burn coal, and you shouldn't put any foreign substance in it, as clinkers often result and fuel is wasted as a consequence.
4. Operating dirty boiler, heater, flue pipe or chimney: A clean heating plant — like a clean automobile engine — will give better service and greater comfort. Remove all soot and fly ash at least once a year.
5. Connecting two heaters into same chimney flue: This practice retards the draft and causes poor heat. If two heaters are connected into the same flue, make sure the draft on the one not being operated is completely shut off and all leaks sealed.
6. Operating hot air furnace without water in the humidifier: Dry air is both uncomfortable and unhealthy. You will get much more satisfaction from your furnace if the humidifier pan is kept filled with water. This is an important health measure.
7. Carrying thin fire bed: The firebox should be filled flush with the lower edge of the fire door. Contrary to the belief held by many people that a half filled firebox saves coal, it actually burns up more coal and at the same time causes much unnecessary inconvenience. A thick fire bed burns better, lasts longer and saves money.
8. Operating your furnace with damper controls disconnected: Strange as it may seem, some people do not bother to keep their damper controls in good working order. These controls are as necessary to your furnace as brakes are to an automobile. They are simple to operate. If handled properly they will save much fuel and add greatly to the comfort of your home. Your fuel dealer can instruct you in the correct use of dampers.
9. Using incorrect sized coal: For best heating results always use the size coal best suited for your heater. Today coal is prepared in several sizes, one of which is sure to give you best results. If the coal is too small it packs too much in the fuel bed. When this takes place it is sometimes difficult to bring up heat quickly. Other troubles may also be caused from a fuel bed that is "packed." Because of the blasting that is necessary it is sometimes very difficult to have the draft pass through this bed of coals. The heat may be retained to such an extent that there may be a possibility of clinkers forming. If the coal is too large in size the air will pass through it too quickly and actually rob heat from the fuel bed. Be sure the correct size of coal is being used.
10. Incorrect Methods of firing: Always fire the coal so that the fuel bed assumes more or less a level position. The depth of the fuel bed will vary depending upon the size of the fire box. Fire the coal level with the bottom of the firing door, always leaving a strip of red coal exposed to act as a pilot light to ignite the gas that will come off from the fresh fuel.

Follow the above suggestions and you will be sure to get more heat that will result in comfortable and healthy conditions during the Winter. If you are in doubt about the correct operation of your heating plant, call on your local fuel dealer. He will be more than pleased to render this service. (1)

Solution Of Saturday's Puzzle

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius.

This year if you'll work twice as hard as you have ever worked before in your life, you'll probably get just a little bit less business than you had last year, but, you'll still be in business.

In these days when emphasis is placed on income it is well to remember what Will Rogers said on that subject.

He maintained that "it isn't so much what you earn as how you spend it."

It would be better for all of us, and for the country as a whole, if we placed emphasis where Rogers did — then government might not have to do so much to check inflation.

Friend—You say you pay only $25 for this beautiful apartment?

Man—Yes, but I'm going to move.

Friend—Good gracious, what has come over you?

Man—A soprano singer.

The Self-Made Man

He boasted to his friends and said:
"I am a self-made man,
Whate'er within my makeup comes
is after my own plan."
But the pattern of his life, they said, was like a crazy quilt;
With scant hopes he'd amount to much unless he was rebuilt.
—Harry Brokaw.

Lily—Do you think she will make him a good wife?

Billy—I don't know, but she'll sure make him a good husband if she gets the chance.

Ideals are funny things. They won't work unless you do.

Butler—I saw you out with a woman last night, and she wasn't your wife.

Master—Well, well, you don't say.

Butler—Not if you raise my salary.

"In time of war, the laughter of the people can be a national tonic—and the circus clown a great physician."—Epictetus.

She—I've always had a presentiment that I should die young.

Dearest Friend—Well, darling, you didn't after all, did you?

Read somewhere that we move in our sleep on an average of every 16 minutes. I weigh 150 pounds in the raw and if I changed position four times an hour I could move 600 pounds an hour. If I were to spend eight hours in bed every night I would move 48,000 pounds every night. I've decided that's why I'm so tired in the morning I can hardly get out of bed.

Sad Folk Travel Joy Street

Visitors to Nantucket, Mass., observe that Joy street leads to a cemetery.

An elderly maiden aunt received this note from her ten-year-old niece: "Dear Aunt Martha: Thank you for your nice present. I have always wanted a pincushion, although not very much."

The American span of life has been increased 12 years since the turn of the present century. It had to be to take care of the tax bills.

Best observation on the war to date: "There are no atheists in fox holes!"

If you have begun to accept things as they are, and quit trying to change them, you're growing old.

A Chicago theatre recently advertised for an organist and pianist, either a lady or a gentleman. One of the replies was rather unusual. It read:

"Dear Sir: I notice you have a vacancy for a pianist and organist, either a lady or a gentleman. Having been both for a number of years, I would like to apply for the position.

Nature, Too, Is Great Enemy of the Rising Sun

Will Nature follow in Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's wake with a volcanic raid, an earthquake attack, or a tidal-wave invasion of Japan?

Scientific bodies in Washington are receiving inquiries as to such a possibility. Some imaginative laymen have even suggested ways that the United Nations might "scientifically" promote such natural hazards in Nippon. Others ask advice about the odds they should wager on another earthquake or volcanic eruption in Japan within the next year.

Of course, seismologists say, none of these natural upheavals can be promoted by man; the belief that they can is in a class with the superstition that heavy gunfire brings rain. Volcanic eruptions, however, can be predicted by their symptoms, and study of the relationship between volcanoes and earthquakes may eventually indicate early warning signs of 'quake disasters.

A dramatic example of successful prediction occurred in 1914 in connection with the outburst of Sakurajima volcano, off the Japanese island of Kyushu. Scientists long had expected trouble in the vicinity, and as the time of the cataclysm approached, stronger and more frequent earth tremors, accompanied by volcanic rumblings, added their warning signals. When the big eruption came, no lives were lost, the island's more than 20,000 inhabitants having fled to the mainland only the day before.

Although their immediate origin is no Shangri-La mystery and certain cycles of possible recurrence may be worked out, neither earthquakes nor volcanic disturbances run on schedule. Moreover, scientists still offer various theories as to the ultimate factors deep within the earth which cause the surface dislocations.

Part of Fighting Equipment

Sugar is far more easily digested than starch. The average starchy foods take three or four hours for digestion, but the human body begins to utilize sugar from ten minutes to half an hour after it has been eaten. For this reason, sugar is an indispensable part of a fighting man's equipment. Candy bars with a high sugar content are a part of the field rations of the United States army. In 1942, according to estimates of the Office of Price Administration, beet sugar, grown and processed in 19 western and middle western states, will for the first time be the largest single source of supply for the American consumer.

Haight's I.Q. Is Given as 119 by Psychiatric Tests

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—Edward Haight, 17-year-old on trial for the murder of two sisters, Margaret, 7, and Helen Lynch, 8, has an intelligence quotient of 119 and records showed that he "made a satisfactory social adjustment throughout his years at school," a psychiatrist testified today.

Defense Counsel Charles J. Wallace, who said Haight would not take the stand in his own defense, listed Dr. James Gaetaniello, assistant physician of the Harlem Valley State Hospital, Wingdale, N. Y., as the sole defense witness.

Dr. Gaetaniello testified that he had first examined Haight on October 19, and four times subsequently while the youth was in Westchester county jail.

The psychiatrist reviewed Haight's living conditions in a two-room shack on the outskirts of Stamford, Conn., which he shared with his father, Arnold, a former convict, and a brother.

Haight was born in Mt. Kisco, N. Y., near the scene of the girls' slaying, the doctor said. School records showed that the youth was promoted every year from the first to the tenth grade, that he had a grade average of "B" or better and that his physical development was normal, the witness said.

"His school record indicates that Edward made a satisfactory adjustment throughout the years at schools," the psychiatrist declared. "He was liked by his teachers and accepted by fellow classmates."

Dr. Gaetaniello added that in February, 1940, when Haight was 15, he was examined by the child guidance clinic of Stamford, which recorded his physical development equivalent to 14 and a half years, his mental age as 16 and his I. Q. as 119, a superior classification.

The psychiatrist said Haight said his ambition was to be an aviator, but he was unable to pass the vision test.

Haight described himself, the witness said, as "very impulsive and quick to action. Once in a while I blow up. I repulse everyone and anyone. I'd take a poke at anyone."

The psychiatrist, added that Haight seemed to enjoy every minute of the examinations and of the events connected with his trial.

When he first talked with the youth, the psychiatrist said, Haight "greeted with a friendly smile" the suggestion that he was facing the electric chair.

Haight gave "not the slightest indication of fear and not any sign of sorrow or remorse," the witness testified, adding that the youth's pulse was not accelerated.

The doctor said he had asked Haight whether he had used his hunting knife on the girls.

"No. I don't think I did," the psychiatrist said Haight replied.

The broken bodies of the two little sisters were found in a stream and a reservoir near their Bedford village home September 14, following their disappearance the night before. Haight directed police in the recovery of the second body.

FIREPLACES

The glow of June . . . when days are long
May well invite the dreamer's song . . .
A song that Summer always brings
When life is rich with fragrant things

The chill of Autumn rushes in
And nights devoid of cheer, begin
But Summer's glow makes rendezvous
Where logs are burned in rainbow hue.
A fireplace sings a gypsy tune
Recalling dreams we shared in June
And flames that dance . . . build castles tall
Within the easy reach of all.

Each fading ember weaves a spell
And paints a scene where mem'ries dwell
Designing pictures new and old
Our fascinated eyes behold.
Instead of coaxing words that rhyme
I sit and idly pass the time
And as I gaze . . . I'm fancy-free
In dreams . . . the fireplace . . . offers me.

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—The more encouraging war news, especially from the Solomons, helped today's stock market in the continuance of the forward swing.

The list started the new week and month with fractional advances predominating. Steels then stepped out in front and, near the fourth hour, plus marks of as much as a point or so were well distributed. Volume was aided by sizable blocks of low-priced issues.

Selected carrier bonds again tiled upward. Commodities were relatively steady.

Among stocks getting into new high ground for the year were Canadian Pacific, Crucible Steel, Consolidated Edison, Graham-Paige and Northern Pacific. Supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Santa Fe, International Harvester, United Aircraft, Standard Oil (N. J.) American Can, Westinghouse, Youngstown Sheet and Republic Steel.

DESTROYER O'BRIEN TORPEDOED AS WASP BURNS

U. S. Navy Adds To Jap Ship Toll

rine and army force on Guadalcanal had failed.

Bearing directly on the navy's qualified success in the Solomons were the blows being struck there by bombers of the MacArthur command from bases in that separate command zone in the southwest Pacific.

Allied airmen under General MacArthur believed they sank or seriously damaged seven enemy vessels yesterday in a pre-dawn assault on Japanese naval concentrations in the Buin-Faisi area, some 300 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

Thirty-three tons of bombs were dropped—the greatest recorded weight of bombs ever dropped in a single operation by these airmen. Two coordinated attacks were delivered by heavy and medium bomber units, at low altitude and in the face of fierce ground fire.

"Accurate observation of the results was difficult," said the communique, "but seven vessels were believed to have been sunk or seriously damaged, one of our planes failed to return."

It was the fourth consecutive pre-dawn attack on the enemy in the Buin-Faisi region.

If the attacks recorded since Thursday were delivered against separate vessels, at least 21 Japanese cargo and fighting ships have been bombed by the MacArthur men in that time, including a heavy cruiser blown up.

The likelihood, however, is that some of the ships were hit more than once in the successive raids.

Mastery Is Challenged

The Japanese meanwhile, had challenged the Allies' mastery of the air over New Guinea. Twenty Zero fighters tackled a strong formation of bombers, escorted by fighters, which crossed New Guinea to attack Lae, north shore Japanese base. Three of the Japanese were shot down. The bombers dropped 10 tons of bombs at Lae.

Three Japanese bombers raided Port Moresby, the Allies' New Guinea base, but there was no damage.

On the mountainous interior front of New Guinea Allied ground forces continued to advance, now being well beyond Isurava and Abuari, within six miles of Kokoda.

Concurrently with the growth of the German threat to breach the Caucasus mountain wall where Russia defends not only her own oil riches but also a vital approach to the Middle East, Turkey has voiced her fear of attack.

The strong Allied showing in Africa—marked today by a report from the Egyptian battlefront that a chunk of the Axis army had been cut off along the Mediterranean—no doubt added to Turkey's inclination to speak her mind.

Unofficial reports said that several thousand men of the Axis African Corps, mostly Germans, were caught when Australian troops made a bayonet charge across the coastal sand dunes, closing the trap.

In the eventuality of a German breakthrough in the Caucasus or a sharp reversal of the British Eighth Army's offensive in Egypt Turkey would have Axis armies not only at her European front door but also at her back door in the Asia Minor part of the Middle East.

Turkey, a land bridge between continents, would be cut off.

Undoubtedly with these things in mind, although he did not mention them or even name Germany, President Ismet Inonu told the Turkish Parliament yesterday that the nation is in danger of attack—"Turkey is closer to war today than at any time since the present conflict started."

Referring implicitly to the Axis, Inonu said:

"With the war spread over every quarter of the globe, one begins to understand that political institutions founded on domination by a single power cannot be maintained."

Inonu pledged Turkey to fulfillment of her alliances which include a treaty with Britain and an amity pact with Germany. In addition, Russia, in 1941, pledged aid to Turkey if Germany attacked her.

Turkey was indeed in the middle, between the European and African fronts.

Reds Fight for Routes

To the northeast, where snow was piled high on the plateaus and in the passes of the Caucasus range, the Red Army was engaged in a struggle to keep the Germans away from military routes debouching at Tiflis and Kutaisi.

To the south of Turkey, across the eastern end of the Mediterranean, the British Eighth Army's offensive on the northern flank of Marshal Rommel's African Corps had achieved a breakthrough of which Rommel himself would have been proud.

Not only were some of his troops caught between the coastal railway and the sea but his whole left, or northern, flank was endangered. The British success was reported thus in the Cairo communique:

"During the night of October 31-November 1 the enemy attempted to attack our troops established west of his position between the railway and the coast. Our infantry held their ground, but some enemy tanks succeeded in joining his infantry in their isolated position."

Behind and over the desert fighting zone and at the Axis island base of Crete the Allied aerial offensive continued without let-up. Two enemy cargo ships were bombed and sunk yesterday when torpedo planes surprised them entering harbor at Tobruk, Libya, after a Mediterranean voyage.

With the Germans stopped at Stalingrad—actually thrown back in some sectors of that wrecked Volga city—the real battle of Russia seemed to have shifted to the mountainous theatre of the deep Caucasus.

The Russians reported fighting only defensive engagements there after a retreat yesterday on the Nalchik plain.

The Germans claimed capture of Alagir, about 25 miles northwest of Ordzhonikidze, head of one military highway winding through the snowbound Caucasian peaks. The Germans also reported further progress in their drive toward Tupase, provisional base of the Russian Black Sea fleet.

The air war in western Europe was in the doldrums, following Saturday's heavy German attack on Canterbury, but the British admiralty reported a small German supply ship set afire and another left sinking after a naval attack by a British patrol yesterday morning.

A German convoy of three small supply ships, escorted by two torpedoboats and an armed trawler, was intercepted off the Brittany coast.

Homemakers' Directions On the Care of Stoves

While homemakers may look ahead to some of the glass, plastics or ceramics stoves now being forecast for the future, for the time being it's a case of making the present kitchen range do.

Permitting the element on the electric stove to become too hot by remaining at a high temperature for a long period of time is pointed out as harmful to the mechanism and wasteful of electricity. The finest metal has been used in the heating units, and should the element happen to burn out through careless handling, chances are it could not be readily replaced.

If a homemaker is unfortunate enough to have food boil over onto her electric stove, the remedy is to let the food burn dry and then brush it off.

Water should never be used on the element. However, daily cleaning of the enamel surface of the stove with soft paper or a damp cloth is recommended. One reason for regular cleaning of the oven is that spilled food is a non-conductor of electricity and therefore more current is required to heat the oven.

In regard to the use of the kerosene stove, there is no danger in using all the burners at one time but the stove should be in good condition with the burners trimmed and well regulated. If homemakers would follow the directions suggested for their particular type of stove, whether electric, gas or kerosene, there would be a more efficient performance.

When electric power was recently rationed in Haiti it decreased the ice made by home refrigerators, causing an extra demand on commercial ice producers, who in turn had to reduce production because of less electricity, and the situation became so bad the ice producers quit.

Telephone System Helps Workers on Big Planes

BUFFALO, N. Y. — Employees working on the final assembly of the new Curtiss-Commando, largest twin-engine military cargo plane in the world, have a two-way telephone system to aid them in their work.

The plan was devised when it was found that due to the Commando's tremendous size and the din of nearby shop and flight test sounds at the Curtiss-Wright corporation plant, shouted orders from one section of the plane to another were unintelligible.

The phone system proved the answer to the handicap, enabling crews to relay messages back and forth between cockpit and tail and cockpit and wings or landing gear.

The electrical impulses for the telephone lines are generated by three small dry cell batteries in a small metal box that can be carried in a jacket pocket.

A permanent telephone plug-in jack built into the Commando's fuselage enables refueling service men to connect a portable phone for conversation with the plane's cabin.

He Didn't Even Work Up A Sweat! What a Man!

FORT DEVENS, MASS.—Private Louis Longval really can take it.

His outfit's program one day included a 14-mile hike, running a tough obstacle course, hand-grenade throwing, bayonet practice, a bit of jujitsu and a swim.

At the end of the day no one asked for a pass—except Longval.

His mates were curious the next morning and Private Longval explained:

He had walked six miles to a nearby town, danced all evening and hiked back to camp.

The Chicago Fire

The great Chicago fire burned for two days and nights, October 9 to 11, 1871. The flames started in a barn owned by Patrick O'Leary at 137 DeKoven street, either from spontaneous combustion in the haymow or to the carelessness of persons smoking in the barn.

The fire burned over 2,100 acres, destroying 17,500 buildings and causing 250 deaths. It destroyed almost a third of the city's property—nearly $200,000,000. Nearly a quarter of the inhabitants were rendered temporarily homeless—70,000 in a population of 324,000.

Democratic Party

The Democratic party claims origin from the earliest years of this republic, Thomas Jefferson being its first leader and spokesman. By 1792 the term Democratic-Republican party was being used to designate the Anti-Federalists or those who believed that the government was becoming too centralized. After the first ten amendments to the Constitution, the "Bill of Rights," were added, this party ceased to oppose the Constitution. The next three Presidents, Madison, Monroe and J. Q. Adams, belonged to the party, which under Andrew Jackson in 1823 became generally known as the Democratic party.

had exercised the power granted under the first war powers act to make emergency navy purchases abroad and to enter the materials free of duty.

"This has measurably assisted our war effort," he said, "but it only partially eliminates the obstacles prescribed by law which I have already mentioned."

"I, therefore, recommend early enactment by the Congress of legislation to the extent required for the effective prosecution of the war, the free movement of persons, property and information into and out of the United States," the President said, adding:

"I do not now recommend that Congress repeal or amend any of these peace time restrictive laws.

"It is my judgment that the problem can best be dealt with by giving to the President for the duration of the war, but no longer, the power on a selective and flexible basis to suspend the operation of all or any such laws, in such a way as to meet new and perhaps unforeseen problems as they may arise, and on such terms as will enable the Chief Executive and the government agencies to work out in detail parallel action in other countries."

The President recalled that on December 23, 1941, he had approved a statement of war production policy for Canada and the United States which recommended suspension during the war of tariffs and other barriers impeding the free flow of munitions between the two countries.

Bible Society Holds Its Annual Meet at St. James

The Ulster County Bible Society held its annual business meeting in St. James Methodist Church October 29 and elected officers for the ensuing year. The Rev. Arthur S. Cole was again chosen as president. The other officers are: First Vice President, Mrs. Irving W. Scott; Second Vice President, H. Westlake Coons; Secretary, the Rev. J. B. Steketee; Associate Secretary, William H. Barringer; Treasurer, Dr. S. W. Ryder. The society re-elected Dr. Ryder and Messrs. Barringer and Coons as directors for the term of three years. The trustees chosen were: Messrs. Irving W. Scott, Hubert Brink, William H. Cornell and the Rev. R. B. Guice and the Rev. A. S. Cole. The society voted, recommending the secretary, the Rev. J. B. Steketee, for life membership in the American Bible Society, and appropriated $50 to the work of that society. Bibles were ordered to assist in religious education work in the Saugerties schools. The members voted that the annual meeting should be held on the last Thursday of October. Last year the society contributed to the Emergency Fund as well as to the regular work of the parent society, in New York. In this, its 127th year, the society clings to its purpose of raising funds for the distribution of the Bible "without note or comment," throughout this country. In the evening, a public meeting was held in the same church and the speaker was the Rev. Dr. James Oscar Boyd, the American Bible Society's secretary in charge of the department of versions. He gave a graphic account of the needs the society seeks to supply.

Dimond, Native Of Mohawk, Sees Catskills as Hills

Washington, Oct. 31. (UP)—Outdoor activity in New York's Mohawk valley in his youth provided Anthony J. Dimond with the health and physique to carry him through the rigors of a prospector's life in Alaska to the office of Alaskan delegate to Congress.

But now, after years of tramping around Arctic territory with its "immense rivers and mountains," New York's Mohawk river and Catskill mountains look "like a creek and hills" to the 60-year-old Dimond.

"I was amazed at the appearance of the Mohawk river and the Catskill mountains when I returned to New York in 1918," he said. "I always regarded the Mohawk as a sizeable river and the Catskills as big mountains."

Dimond left his farm home in Stone Arabia, Montgomery county, 38 years ago for Alaska. For 11 years, he panned gold in Calamity Gulch and prospected the southern Alaska goldfields. He failed to find the fortune he expected, but he won fame as one of Alaska's foremost political leaders and an astute student of the Arctic territory's strategic value to the United States.

Five years before Pearl Harbor, he warned Congress that Japanese "fishing" boats in Alaskan waters carried Nipponese naval officers intent on collecting information of military value. He was instrumental in getting Alaska's outmoded defenses modernized and was an early advocate of the Alaskan highway through Canada, now nearing completion under the supervision of Army engineers.

He believes that after the war Alaska will be the land of opportunity for Americans hardy enough to stand the rigors of outdoor life. "It is a frontier country with all the opportunities the old west presented to the pioneers," he said, "but it's going to take tough men willing to work hard to develop it."

Dimond's career as a prospector ended when he suffered a leg injury. He resumed the study of law which he had begun in New York and was admitted to the bar in Alaska. Success came quickly in a land where there were few lawyers. He married and settled down in Valdez, a coastal city in southern Alaska.

He was United States commissioner for a year and an assistant United States attorney and mayor of Valdez for several years before the people of Alaska sent him to Congress in 1933 as their delegate.

Although he considers himself an Alaskan now, Dimond still retains an affection for New York. During his prospecting days, he said, he frequently encountered fellow prospectors from New York "and we always sat down and talked about things back in the Empire State." Joseph H. Murray, former Amsterdam lawyer with whom Dimond went to Alaska in 1904, is still there, the delegate said, practicing law in Cordova.

During a conversation recently with Representative Byrne of Albany, Dimond remarked he had attended St. Mary's Catholic Institute in Amsterdam.

"Did you know Sister Marcellus there?" Byrne asked.

"Certainly, she was our mother superior," Dimond replied.

"Well, she was my cousin," said Byrne.

Dimond still has close family connections with New York. A brother, Roy, a lumber dealer, lives in Fonda, and another brother, Herbert, is a lawyer in New York.

The A.L.P. claims the balance of power on that showing, since Lehman won by 64,000.

Dewey supporters drew added encouragement from Willkie's Saturday night endorsement, in which the 1940 Republican presidential candidate said he would vote the entire Republican state ticket in anticipation it "will give New York a liberal government."

Election of Dewey would make him a strong possibility for the 1944 presidential nomination, in which Willkie again is expected to figure prominently.

A Bennett victory on the other hand could mean control of New York's delegation to the Democratic National Convention for Farley, who obtained Bennett's nomination over objections of President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt, however, since has endorsed the attorney general twice.

Farley declared last night that election of Dewey "would remove every vestige of home rule in the state of New York."

"He knows too much about the effect of fear and the threat of investigation to be safe in a position where he can use these un-American elements to force his will," Farley asserted.

The attack followed a Saturday night speech in which Dewey assailed Farley and national Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn as "poltical has-beens." Bennett meanwhile cited the 1937 filing of incorporation papers of the German-American Bund of Buffalo, bearing, he said, the law firm name of "Ladd, Garono and Jaeckle, Buffalo, N. Y."

"The Jaeckle was Edwin F. Jaeckle, Republican state chairman," Bennett said in a Tammany Hall speech.

Jaeckle called Bennett's "imputations" a "premeditated falsehood" and said the attorney general "has proved himself a traitor to the American Legion and has slandered his own comrades."

"The photograph he used claiming that it showed me present before marching German storm troopers," Jaeckle explained, "was in fact a photograph of the famous American Legion Drum Corps."

Besides a governor, voters will elect a lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller, complete state senate and assembly, two representatives-at-large and 43 district representatives. The fight of Rep. Hamilton Fish (R) for reelection in President Roosevelt's home district features the congressional races.

Polls throughout the state will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Dewey, Bennett and Alfange planned final radio appeals tonight, with Farley also to broadcast.

The air raid wardens of the Eighth Ward will hold an important meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Rapid Hose house on Hone street. All men and women of the ward who are interested in civilian defense are invited to meet with the air wardens this evening.

Allies to Feed, Arm U. S. Forces

Will Partially Repay Lend-Lease Aid Given to the United Nations.

WASHINGTON.—American armed forces on various fighting fronts of the world will be supplied locally with military equipment, munitions, food supplies and other facilities under the terms of a series of agreements signed here.

The agreements, concluded with the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Fighting France, provide the opportunity for at least partial repayment of the lend-lease assistance the United States has furnished for those fighting the Axis.

They specify that the war production and war resources of the Allies shall be pooled in the most effective way and that assistance shall be given American forces by their allies in the various theaters of operation to conserve shipping and increase the efficiency of the Allied war effort.

Signs for United States.

Secretary of State Hull signed the agreements for the United States. Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, signed for the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, while Sir Owen Dixon and Walter Nash, the ministers of Australia and New Zealand, signed for their governments.

The agreement with Fighting France, the former Free French organization of which Gen. Charles de Gaulle is the head, was arranged through an exchange of notes in London between Brig. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, acting U. S. military representative, and Maurice de Jean, representing the French national committee.

The agreements broaden and formalize the lend-lease agreements, making them into more effective mutual-assistance pacts. They specify that the war production and war resources of the four signatory governments and the Fighting French organization shall be used in ways that most effectively utilize available materials, manpower, production facilities and shipping space. They provide that each party to the agreements shall provide the maximum in reciprocal aid so that the need of foreign currency shall be reduced to a minimum.

Covers Wide Range.

The types of assistance which is to be given American armed forces locally were listed as follows:

(A) Military equipment, munitions and military and naval stores.

(B) Other supplies, materials, facilities and services for the U. S. forces, except for the pay and allowances of such forces, administrative expenses and such local purchases as its official establishments may make other than through the official establishments of the government of the United Kingdom (or the other parties).

(C) Supplies, materials and services needed in the construction of military projects, tasks and similar capital works required for the common war effort in the United Kingdom or in the British colonial empire (or in territories of the others), except for the wages and salaries of U. S. citizens.

(D) Supplies, materials and services needed in the construction of such military projects, tasks and capital works in territory other than the United Kingdom (or the others) to the extent that the United Kingdom (or the others) is a more practicable source of supply than the United States or another of the United Nations.

Eight cargo carrier—four American, two British, one Norwegian and one Panamanian—last week were announced sunk by the enemy in the western Atlantic.

Seven were attacked off South America's northern coast, the biggest score achieved by U-boats in that area over a seven-day period in more than two months. The other was attacked off the United States.

At least 49 seamen died in the sinkings, which raised to 510 the Associated Press count of announced united and neutral nations merchant ship losses in Western Atlantic enemy action since Pearl Harbor. Four men were reported missing.

Unknown Donor's $5.00 Is Start of Loan Fund

A $5 banknote, left anonymously upon the doorstep of the president of the Pennsylvania State college two years ago, has increased its value almost 1,000 times.

With that banknote as a starter, Mrs. Ralph D. Hetzel, wife of the president of the college, established a loan fund which is available to students when they need it in an emergency.

Total loans of $4,981 have been made to students. With $10 named as the highest loan, students borrow money from this fund to meet emergency needs for food and room rent, special visits home, job interviews and medical expenses.

No interest is charged and no time is specified for the payment of such a loan. The only requisite is that a student must need the money to tide him over an emergency. Up to and including August 31, 338 students have borrowed 524 times from the fund.

Nearly two-fifths of the loans were made to men and women who needed money for food and living expenses. Graduation expenses, books and shoes, eye glasses, clothes, and personal reasons were other necessities which brought the student to the emergency loan fund.

Donations, many of them from alumni, faculty, and undergraduates, have increased the fund to its present status of $2,367.

Inonu Declaration May Be Warning

ment which Inonu apparently has in mind as a possibility. In view of the circumstances there is much significance in his statement "that political institutions founded on domination by a single power cannot be maintained."

That would seem at once to be a declaration of Turkish policy and a prediction that the Axis cannot win the war.

Platinum Ring Is Out

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)--Fashionable or not, the platinum wedding ring is about out. The war production board today prohibited the use of platinum in making jewelry. Platinum articles already manufactured, however, may be sold. Platinum is needed for a number of war purposes, such as the manufacture of nitric acid and radio tubes.

Off-Year Balloting May Total 30 Millions

was reached in 1937 when it was 333 to 89.

The present line-up in the House is 257 Democrats, 165 Republicans, five other parties, and eight vacancies, fow hich seven were Democratic and one Republican.

The Democrats look for net gains in the House elections in New Hampshire, Indiana, Michigan, Montana, and California. They also are counting certain pick-ups, by reapportionment, of one seat each in Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arizona, and New Mexico, and two out of the three seats that California gains this year by population growth.

Republicans expect to make their House gains in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Massachusetts, Michigan, Maryland, Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

One hundred House candidates, mostly in the south, will be elected without opposition.

Chief interest in the governorship races centers in the pivotal states of New York, California, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Massachusetts. Republican leaders are claiming victories in all six states. The first three now have Democratic governors and the Democrats say they will continue to be Democratic next year. They do not concede the other states either.

Republicans base their principal hopes on Thomas E. Dewey to beat John J. Bennett, Jr., Democrat, in the New York race, and on Earl Warren, California's attorney general, to defeat Gov. Culbert L. Olson, Democrat.

A victory for Dewey would put him among the top eligibles for the presidential nomination in 1944, as he was in 1940, although he has promised to serve out a full four year term if elected governor. Similarly, re-elections of Governors Harold E. Stassen in Minnesota and John W. Bricker in Ohio might place them in the Republican presidential or vice presidential limelight two years hence.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

PERSONALITY CANNOT BE APPLIED

To a young girl, a freshman at college who asks me how to acquire "personality" I can at least send one piece of advice: Forget that there is such a word in the language! It is not that this quality is unimportant—as a matter of fact it is at many times more important than any other asset that one can have, but like its counterpart, charm—it is not a tangible commodity to be applied as though it were a cosmetic.

Where to Send Presents?

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter's fiance is in the Coast Guard and we have come out here with my daughter to stay until she is married. Our home is far inland and it will be impossible for other members of our family and our friends to join us here, therefore, we are going to send out announcements only. I feel sure that many friends and relatives of both the bride and groom will want to send them wedding presents but how can we let them know where to send them if they get no notices until the announcements, and by that time we may all have gone elsewhere?

Answer: It seems to me the best thing to do is to write personal notes—the bride to her own friends, the groom to his friends, and you to old friends and members of the bridegroom's family, as well as of your own. Tell them that the wedding is to take place on such a day, and that they will be very welcome should it be possible for them to come. Tell them where you now are. Send these notes at once so that messages of good will or possibly their presents will arrive before the marriage. As a matter of fact it would not be improper to send out regular wedding invitations instead of announcements, from no matter what distance since, as I have written many times before, a wedding invitation means that "You will be welcome if you can come"; whereas an announcement merely means that a wedding has taken place to which (for no matter how good the reason) you were not invited.

Long Dresses and No Cars

Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell us whether it will be suitable for the girls to wear long dresses at the buffet supper before going to church for the rehearsal? We'll be walking or going on the bus because none of us have cars.

Answer: Since a wedding rehearsal is never a dress reheasal it will be proper to wear whatever is most practical.

Dear Mrs. Post: How should a letter to a Lieutenant be directed?

Answer: If he's a Second Lieutenant in the Army, 2nd is prefixed in his name. If he's a First Lieutenant, you address him as Lieutenant. If he is in the Navy, a Lieutenant, senior grade, is addressed as Lieutenant. If he is a junior grade, he is addressed Lieutenant (j. g.) John Smith.

Mrs. Post's two booklets, "The Etiquette of Weddings," and "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," really belong in every home. Send for them, enclosing ten cents in coins and a three-cent stamp for each booklet ordered. Address Mrs. Post, care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y.

Healthy Cork Oak Trees Grow in Southern States

Expansion of growing areas and large increases in plantings in 1942 will constitute an important advance toward national self-sufficiency in cork, hitherto largely imported from the western Mediterranean region, Dr. Giles B. Cooke, Baltimore, reported in the publication of the American Chemical society.

Projected plantings of 50,000 young cork trees in California this year compare with 21,000 set out in 1941 in California and Arizona combined. Domestic cork is equal to the Mediterranean product, and may be used interchangeably with the imported material, experiments on California cork show.

A survey of the southern states showed that large healthy cork oak trees were growing in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

Agricultural directors and forestry specialists in these states and Florida, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas extended co-operation. Already more than 800 young cork trees have been planted in sections of these states, and 1,000 more seedlings that developed late are being held for distribution in October.

Dutch Guiana History

In 1667 the Netherlands traded what is now New York for the South American jungle colony of Surinam (Netherlands, or Dutch, Guiana). Paramaribo became the colonial port to which the settlers shipped their African slaves for work on their vast sugar plantations. So cruel and hard was the life that the slaves rebelled in the early 1700s, a number escaping to the surrounding jungles. From there, out of reach of the white authorities, they waged guerrilla warfare against the colonists. After decades of intermittent struggle, featured on both sides by torture and massacres, a peace was concluded, and on the black man's terms. In accordance with the treaty, the bush tribes not only won the right to rule themselves without interference and to pay no taxes, but also secured an annual cash tribute from the Surinam government, payable to their head man.

Marbles Acquire Value

There is amusement for children of nearly all ages in such elemental manifestations as quick motions, bright colors, symmetry of form, smoothness and clashing of sounds. All these are supplied by marbles, and, therefore, it is quite natural that they should have become almost universally adopted as one of the playthings of childhood. We must not lose sight of the undeniable fact that the latter runs right on through youth, adolescence and into full maturity.

Consequently we might expect, as we do find, that marbles are an enjoyment through the entire age period—a toy for the nursery, dice for the "sidewalk and alley craps" of boyhood, articles for rival games in the sports of youth and manhood, and finally collectors' items.

Cardinal Presides At Special Mass

Pontifical Service Attended by 21,000 Persons

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP) — The might of the Roman Catholic Church in America for victory in the war effort was placed before the world with authority and great dignity yesterday by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, during a solemn pontifical Mass heard by 21,000 at Convention Hall.

Red-robed and red-hatted the cardinal stood at the microphones which carried his voice around the world and warned Americans of the fate they face if the Axis wins.

"If we lose the war this land will be the choice prize of despoilers," he said in a voice that trembled with emotion. "It will be pounced upon by vultures which will devour it to the bone.

"We shall have the points of bayonets at our throats and the muzzles of muskets pressed against our heads. If one wishes to picture our fate in case of defeat he has only to look at what has taken place in the conquered parts of Europe * * *. We must, we will win the victory," he said.

The Mass was offered for victory, a lasting peace and for the repose of the souls of war victims. Speaking by short wave to the American men under arms the cardinal added: "We pray that in every battle with our enemies God's protecting hand may be stretched over you."

A message from President Roosevelt and a sermon by Auxiliary Bishop Hugh A. Lamb, of Philadelphia, also were broadcast. The President's message urged that in these days of crises "we must all unite in labor and in prayer to achieve victory and to bring back to the world an international order dominated by true Christian principles."

Campaign to Vaccinate Grade School Pupils

A campaign to vaccinate grade school children of the city for smallpox will start Wednesday morning when Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, will visit School No. 2 and vaccinate pupils who have not been treated against the disease.

Dr. Sanford said that consent slips for the parents to sign have been distributed in all of the grade and parochial schools in the city, that all the schools will be visited and children whose parents have given their consent will be vaccinated.

Last week Dr. Sanford vaccinated approximately 25 pupils from the high school and the M. J. M. School. The health officer states that vaccination of these children will aid materially in protecting all of the children of the city against smallpox.

Legs Most Beautiful

You have the word of Artist Varga that Hazel Brooks' legs (above) are the most beautiful in Hollywood. "Her legs are lothesome," he said of the M-G-M actress, "with fragil ankles, length, satin skin texture and enticing line."

Searching Party Finds Lester Bailey's Body

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP) Some days ago in his ancient Baileytown home, the Old Man of Bear Mountain wrote this note:

"I have gone to the fields."

Lester Bailey, 72—Old Man Bailey to the hundreds who knew him —put the note on a table, strapped on his ancient two-barrel shotgun and set out with his dog, Tinker, for a night's 'coon hunting.

It was old man Bailey's last journey into the fields that had known him all his life.

A searching party found his dead yesterday.

But in dying, Old Man Bailey added one final legend of these hills to the countless ones that had aged with him . . .

A 16-pound raccoon, killed by his gun, was slung over his body.

Orange County Coroner Frank Cromwell said Old Man apparently died of heart disease. The party had searched since Thursday after Bailey's son, Robert, reported him missing.

The dog was found two days ago —emaciated and exhausted.

Neighborhood Affair

Albion, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—The campaign for Orleans county judge and surrogate which ends tomorrow has been pretty much of a neighborhood affair with the Republican and Democratic candidates for office living next door to each other. Their campaign managers also are next door neighbors. All four live within a block of each other. Running for election is Democratic Judge Daniel W. Hanley, Jr., appointed to the post last January by Governor Lehman. His Republican opponent is Charles G. Signor, whose father, the late Isaac Signor, held the office 19 years. They have lived next to each other for 22 years. Farther down the street lives Herbert T. Reed, Republican county chairman and Signor's law partner. Next door to him resides M. Murray Dailey, Democratic county chairman, who is handling Hanley's campaign.

M. Spencer of Aylesbury, England, aged 77, has just completed 59 years as a bicycle rider, and in the last three years has ridden 6,906 miles.

Kingston, N. Y.

Editor of The Freeman:

On the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, I commend the following thoughts to your readers:

The last 25 years have seen the Balfour Declaration buffeted about in the storm of political rivalries, chicaneries and racial animosities. The Declaration has suffered particularly rough treatment in the treacherous currents of appeasement. So true is all this that its original intent has been almost blotted out by a series of interpretations, and the last of them, the notorious White Paper of 1939, has to all intents and purposes abrogated it.

Twenty-five years have now elapsed since the Balfour Declaration was issued and Jewish communities throughout America are observing the anniversary. The question may well be asked: Is it proper, in view of the vicissitudes that have befallen this document, to celebrate its birth?

Our answer to that question is emphatic "Yes!" In spite of everything, the Balfour Declaration remains a historic document of the first order. It marked the official recognition by a great power of "The historic connection of the Jewish people with Palestine and the reasons for reconstituting the Jewish National Home." It rallied to the support of the great project the other civilized nations of the world, among them the United States of America. What is equally important, it rallied to its support a new stream of the energy, the idealism, and the resources of the Jewish people. It brought wave after wave of Jewish immigration into Palestine, led by a vanguard of pioneers whose record would shine brightly in the history of any people. It served, and it still serves, as the most important point of reference in the claims of the Jewish people to the recognition by the world of its right to a national home of its own in the land that is identified with its pristine greatness.

It is not the habit of history, any more than it is the habit of any thing else in nature, to march in a straight line. A river whose general course is toward the east, will sometimes veer to the north or south. It may sometimes appear to go back on itself. Nevertheless, its general course will continue towards the east. The checkered history of the restoration of the Second Jewish Commonwealth which began with Ezra and Nehemiah will do much to illuminate the course of the restoration of the Third Jewish Commonwealth.

The world can join heartily in the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, and trust that Jewish communities throughout the world, in the present hour that is so tragically dark for many of them, will find in the observance of this anniversary an augury of the brighter future that will come.

A special program commemorating the occasion will be broadcast tonight over station WKNY at 7:15.

Sincerely yours,
ABRAHAM STREIFER
President, Kingston Zionist District

LaGuardia Has Own Coffee-Making Recipe

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Busy Mayor La Guardia has barged into the kitchen again—now with his own recipe for brewing coffee.

In his weekly broadcast yesterday the mayor, whose latest utterances in matters culinary pertained to meat rationing, advised the little woman to (A) stow away her modern percolator for the duration, (B) dust off the old-fashioned coffee pot, and (C) proceed as follows:

"Just take a spoonful (of coffee) to a cup—that's pretty strong —and then brew it.

"Let it come to a boil for a very short time, then set it aside and let it settle and also strain the coffee in serving it.

"I wouldn't throw the grounds away if anyone in the family is accustomed to having coffee for their midday or evening meal; just adding a sprinkle on the top of the old grounds will make a very good cup of coffee for the evening."

La Guardia recalled an old saw of the frontier housewives. "Never wash your coffee pot"—but advised against it. He said his mother back in Arizona had rejected it, despite the theory that flavor accumulated and grew richer with successive brewings.

He urged that the new coffee regulations be accepted with order and intelligence, asserting:

"Please don't be silly about this and start chiseling and buying more coffee than you need. A great many people have done that, and that just isn't nice, it isn't patriotic and it shouldn't be done."

Seaman.

Ecuador's Santa Elena Peninsula Has U. S. Base

Uncle Sam's site for a new base in South America, on Ecuador's Santa Elena peninsula, is in a dry, tropical, lowland region of petroleum production and cattle grazing.

The Santa Elena peninsula, near the southern end of Ecuador's coast line, is the Republic's farthest projection westward into the Pacific ocean. Almost due west of the peninsula's tip, 600 miles off shore, are the Galapagos islands, where another base site was granted to the United States by Ecuador, in the same agreement.

La Libertad, port town on the north shore of Santa Elena peninsula is 785 air miles south and slightly west of the Panama canal, across the Gulf of Panama. It is approximately a hundred miles by water and 75 miles by rail west of Ecuador's principal port, Guayaquil, a city of 150,000 people located 40 miles inland on the chocolate-brown waters of the Guayas river. Most of Ecuador's sea-borne trade to Panama and to the West coast of North America must round the peninsula before turning north.

The tip of Santa Elena peninsula is 160 miles south of the Equator. In that short distance Ecuador's coast changes from a forest region of abundant rain to a comparatively dry, desert area with only a scattering of low shrubs. The mean annual temperature on the peninsula is about 83 degrees Fahrenheit. The climate is pleasant during the dry months from June to December, but humid and enervating during the first half of the year. Whereas, Negroes thrive in the moist coastal forests to the north, Indians prove to be better fitted for life on the dry reaches of the peninsula.

$30,000,000 Spent for Recreation by U. S. Cities

Recreation needs for war industry workers as well as service men, and conditioning programs for civilian defense workers contributed in 1941 to an expanded national recreation program costing cities more than $30,000,000.

Although this expenditure did not approach the peak outlay of pre-depression days, it was nearly $1,000,000 more than was spent in 1940, according to figures submitted by 1,164 cities to the National Recreation association, source of the city manager association's information.

Expenditures for the current-year may rise equally high or higher, the association said, since tire and gas rationing are providing new reasons for programs for stay-at-homes.

Popular in municipal recreation programs were picnicking and gardening, reported by an increasing number of cities. Basketball, bowling-on-the-green, football, boating, swimming, skiing and first aid classes are other activities listed as favorites in recreation programs.

Nearly 18 per cent—or 207—of the cities offered special services for men in uniform last year, while 190 cities provided special services for war industry workers. Among these services were evening-hour programs and clubs for families of workers new to the city. In addition, 300 or more recreation agencies said they had served large numbers of service men through their regular facilities.

Such Men As . . .

Some of the principal arguments against United States membership in the League were advanced by such men as Senator Borah, Senator Johnson and the late Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. The arguments were that it has been since its earliest history the policy of the United States to avoid foreign entanglements; that the proper province of the United States is the Western hemisphere, and that any interest of the United States with the Eastern hemisphere, other than commercial, is non-existent; that the United States is a sovereign Nation and that adhesion to the League covenant delegates a part of the sovereignty to a state established in a foreign country and composed of foreign nations.

Barbados' Fine Climate

Healthful climate has in fact so encouraged native black population as to make Barbados one of the world's most heavily peopled areas of its size. Almost 200,000 people live on its 166 square miles. The density, nearly 1,200 people per square mile, is comparable to that of China's most crowded provinces. Labor is cheap and mass production methods have been purposely withheld from the island's great sugar industry because they would cause unemployment and starvation. Women outnumber men largely because thousands of rugged Barbados males have moved to less crowded neighboring islands for employment.

Hemp Substitute

O. R. Winchester of Boynton, Fla., has expressed a willingness to start growing sansevieria as a substitute for hemp in rope making until large-scale operations could be started with federal assistance.

Under the proposal 100,000 mature plants, sufficient to cover ten acres, would be set out at once for study and for production of fiber for experimental purposes. Subsequent commercial planting would be on a tract of 250 acres of improved land now available.

Argentina has declared that all olive plants must be kept in the country because they are needed to intensify production of olive oil, which came from Italy, Spain and Greece before the war.

Kingston 'Spotter' Service Will Hold Educational Drive

To draw its volunteer "spotter" organization of the Aircraft Warning Service into a closed relation with the public at large, officers of the local Observation Post located on the roof of the Governor Clinton Hotel have readily accepted a plan presented by the A.W.S. public relations officer of Ulster county. The plan calls for school groups headed by teachers or by representatives appointed by a school principal, organizations, both religious and fraternal, to be invited by appointment, on specified dates, to witness the actual functioning of the "spotter" service.

Such groups, limited in numbers, will be taken in charge of a "spotter-guide" qualified to explain the purpose of the Post and group guests will have an opportunity to enter the observation post proper and observe the "spotters" on duty at actual work. Guests will be allowed to use any movable equipment now employed by "spotters" in order to gain a better knowledge and understanding of the service rendered by the Post for both the community and the United States Army—under whose direction these posts function.

The New York Air Wing of the First Fighter Command has 10,000 observation posts between Florida and Maine. Eighteen such posts are located in Ulster county with 1,500 men and women volunteer "spotters" manning these posts on a 24-hour basis. Day or night, in scorching heat or biting frost these watchers of our skylanes keep vigil.

Sam N. Mann, chief observer, Associate Chief Observers Mrs. George D. Logan, Robert Rhinehart and Daniel W. Benton, are the officers in charge of Kingston's Observation Post.

Three Are Winners At City's Party

Sundra Mackey, Charles Crispell and Charles Aleuz were the winners in the costume judging at the Halloween party held Saturday evening in the Municipal Auditorium under the auspices of the city's recreation department and Kingston Post of the American Legion. The party was one of the most successful held, and was attended by some 3,000 persons, both young and old.

Before the party started, however, groups of children in costume gathered for the two big parades. The uptown parade formed at Academy Green and marched to the auditorium headed by the Kingston High School Band, while the downtown groups gathered in front of St. Mary's School and marched to the auditorium headed by the Sons of the Legion Drum Corps.

Many persons lined the sidewalks to watch the parades.

At the auditorium a most interesting program was arranged and the festivities opened with all of the children in costume forming a grand march around the auditorium, and then several stunts were staged and community singing followed led by Sidney Lutzin, recreation director, with Edward Ward at the piano.

Fred L. Van Deusen, Kingston's leading magician, entertained with a bagful of new tricks, which was followed by the costume judging. The judges were Secretary Burt Tandy of the Y. M. C. A., Nelson Snyder of the American Legion and Miss Dorothy Lowe, Girl Reserves secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

This year there were three classes. The winner of the patriotic class group was little Sandra Mackey; Charles Crispell as a hobo was the winner in the class of children under 16 years of age, while Charles Aleuz, also as a hobo, was the winner in the adult group.

Following the judging and the awarding of the prizes which had been donated by the 40 & 8, eight reels of movies were shown by Henry Millonig, Jr.

It was about 11 o'clock that night when the party broke up, with all present declaring it was one of the most enjoyable parties since the affair had been made an annual event in the city.

Egg-Drying Plants Put Out 200 Million Pounds

One egg out of every seven produced in 1942 will go to a drying plant to be made into egg powder for use by United States armed forces on far-flung battle fronts, and by the Allies.

Proper marketing practices are vital to the success of the egg production program in 1942 designed to meet wartime requirements.

Producing eggs means a lot more than giving hens all they will eat and leaving the rest to chance. Eggs produced this year to supply needs during the present emergency must be good eggs when they leave the farm and good ones when they reach the consumer.

About two-thirds of the 1942 goal of 4⅗ billion dozens has been reached. The remaining one-third, or about 1⅓ billion dozen eggs, stands between success or failure of the program.

Egg drying plants are called upon to produce 200 million pounds of eggs, which means the use of at least 600 million dozen eggs. In addition, there are large demands for fresh shell eggs by the armed forces stationed in the country.

Production of quality eggs begins with producing infertile eggs, keeping nests clean, collecting eggs at least three times daily and cooling them properly, packing in clean containers, and marketing frequently. Infertile eggs keep best under all conditions and are most desirable for food purposes.

Wilson's 14 Points

The famous 14 points assailed by Hitler were first outlined to congress by President Wilson in January, 1918. These points which Wilson believed necessary to a post-war settlement were, briefly: 1. Open treaties through open international diplomacy. 2. Freedom of the seas. 3. Free international trade. 4. Disarmament. 5. Impartial adjustment of colonial claims. 6. Evacuation of Russian territory. 7. Evacuation of Belgium. 8. Evacuation of French territory and return of Alsace-Lorraine to France. 9. Readjustment of Italian frontiers. 10. Autonomy for Austria and Hungary. 11. Evacuation of Rumania, Serbia, and Montenegro and security for Balkan states. 12. Sovereignty for Turkey along lines of nationality. 13. An independent Poland. 14. Formation of a "general association of nations."

How 'Maverick' Began

Soon after the Mexican war, Samuel A. Maverick began locating land and raising cattle. Eventually he owned more land and had more cattle on the free public range than anyone else in Texas. In 1861 most of the cowboys of the region left to enter the Civil war, and Maverick's cattle were left to run wild. When the war ended there were tens of thousands of unbranded animals, and in the round-ups that followed Maverick was the greatest claimant of unmarked cattle. So often was it said of stock that "these are Maverick's" that eventually all strayed calves and other unbranded cattle came to be referred to as mavericks.

Gas and electricity are rationed in unoccupied France to about half the normal amount.

Gun Accidentally Goes Off but Injures No One

A gun accidentally went off Sunday afternoon, but fortunately no one was wounded when it discharged, according to a report made to the police department by Harry Van Wagenen of 198 Tremper avenue.

Mr. Van Wagenen reported to the police that day that he had gone to his bedroom where he kept his gun. He said it was never loaded when in the house, and that he kept the shells in a trunk.

He saw the weapon was cocked when he picked it up and as he let down the hammer there was a crash. The "empty" gun discharged a load of No. 5 shot through the bedroom window, some of which was imbedded in the side of the adjoining house.

Mr. Van Wagenen said he later made a further investigation and his 10-year-old son informed him that he had placed a shell in the gun.

Saugerties Man Held For Not Having License

Donald Boura of Saugerties, driver of the car which was involved in a collision with a truck near the 9-W Skating Rink on the Kingston-Saugerties road Friday night, was arrested by Sergeant James J. Cunningham and Trooper Walter Keefe Sunday on a charge of operating a car without a license. Before Justice Frank Hughes of Saugerties a plea of guilty was entered and a $10 fine paid.

Boura and Leonard Freligh of Saugerties were riding in the car of Jacob Schneider near the rink about 11 o'clock Friday night when the car and a tractor-trailer collided. Both were injured. Boura was treated at the Kingston Hospital and discharged Saturday. Carlton Jenkins of Long Beach, N. Y., driver of the truck, was also injured and treated at the hospital.

Off for Camp Upton

President's Decision Might Alter Americans' Eating

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—Eating habits of Americans civilians for the duration of the war may be determined largely by the decision President Roosevelt makes on a prosposal that he appoint a food administrator to control production and consumption.

The proposal, advanced by war production board chairman Donald M. Nelson, reflects sharp and fundamental differences within the government over war food requirements and the possibility of further shortages.

At the bottom of these differences is the question of how much manpower, machinery, transportation, and other facilities should be devoted to food production.

On the one hand are those—including Secretary of Agriculture Wickard—who believes that food production should be maintained at as near present record levels as possible in order that civilians as well as the United Nations fighting forces may have well-balanced diets.

On the other are those—including some war production board officials and military authorities—who believe that the country cannot meet both its military manpower and material needs and still maintain agricultural production at anywhere near present levels.

This latter group contends that, in the interest of a quick and successful conclusion of the war, food production should be stripped largely to cereals, potatoes, and vegetable oil crops for civilians. Production of meats, dairy and poultry products and vegetables, they believe, should be reduced to a level deemed necessary to provide military and lend-lease requirements and allow civilians a considerably smaller quantity than is now made available for them.

Another issue has been allocation of materials for farm machinery. The W.P.B. will allow farmers to get only 23 per cent as much machinery as they bought in 1940. Wickard believes this is far too small.

Causing other disagreements is the matter of controlling existing food supplies. Wickard is known to favor immediate allocation or rationing for all major classes of food to make present supplies last as long as possible and to prevent hoarding. As yet, the W.P.B. and the office of price administration, agencies responsible for rationing, have shown little inclination to agree.

A food administrator would have to deal with these differences of views, take stock of needs and supplies, determine production possibilities under varying conditions, decide how much productive ability could be spared for food, and then develop a plan in accordance. Such a plan might involve sharp changes in civilian eating.

Neighbor Gives Testimony Based On Wergin Story

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP)—A neighbor of Otto Wergin, one of six persons on trial on treason charges, testified today that Wergin told her in 1939 he would want Germany to win in a war with the United States, and his American citizenship papers "mean nothing more to me than to throw in the gutter."

Mrs. Tim Kelly, tall, blonde and matronly, told a Federal Court jury Wergin declared in the fall of 1939 shortly after Britain and Germany went to war:

"If the United States were at war with Germany our population might be wiped out in two weeks."

Richard Finn, assistant United States district attorney, asked Mrs. Kelly if she ever did anything about the remarks of Wergin and his wife, Kate, also a defendant.

"Yes," she replied, "I reported them to the F. B. I. in 1939."

The Wergins are friends of Hans and Erna Haupt, parents of Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the six Nazi saboteurs who landed from Germany by submarine in June and were executed after trial by a military commission.

The Wergins, Haupts and Walter and Lucille Froehling, aunt and uncle of Herbert, are charged with committing treason by aiding and assisting young Haupt in his plot of destruction of United States war industries.

Mrs. Kelly related she lived in the same apartment building with the Wergins from 1936 through 1939. She told of accompanying them to a German motion picture program and of seeing German periodicals in their home.

Says She Was 'Fired'

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Ethel S. Epstein, wife of the Democratic candidate for state attorney general, announced in a statement issued at Democratic headquarters today that she had been "fired" from her post as Mayor La Guardia's labor secretary. Mrs. Epstein released an exchange of letters with the mayor and indicated, in the face of the mayor's disclaimer, that she had been discharged because of her campaign on behalf of her husband, Henry Epstein. Epstein was not endorsed by the American Labor party, of which Mayor La Guardia is an enrolled member.

State Police Take Carbondale Men For Thefts of Tires

Theft of automobile tires which have been reported from various places between Middletown and Binghamton apparently have been explained by the arrest of two Carbondale, Pa., men by state police. Fourteen garages had been reported broken into and tires stolen. The burglaries were effected during the hours the garages were closed when thieves would enter the places and strip tires from new cars which had been frozen in the hands of dealers.

Friday morning while Troopers Rock and Viscocil were secreted in a garage at Afton, Chenango county, two men entered the premises about 3 o'clock. The troopers arrested the men and later identified them as Joseph Seiczina, Carbondale gas station operator and Joseph Malinowski also of Carbondale. The troopers charged the pair with burglary and held them for grand jury action.

Also working on the case were Trooper Edward Croswell of the local B. C. I. and Trooper Branigan. Trooper Croswell said the men caught in the operation of robbing the garage at Afton had three former convictions against them. Their plan was to drive from their home town to a distant point by car and then enter a garage, remove the tires and return home to sell the tires. The usual price was $35 per tire. The number of tires taken from the fourteen garages which have reported losses is not known but from one of the garages reporting losses 19 tires were taken at one time.

Lawyer Is Shot

New York, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—Sidney Fischman, prominent Rockland county lawyer, was shot and seriously wounded today by a man who forced Fischman's car off the road a quarter mile from here, entered his car and fired five shots from a .22 caliber revolver. Fischman had just attended the opening session of the November session of Supreme Court and had started driving west on the new Hempstead road shortly before noon with a client, George Erickson, when the other driver forced his car off the road.

Women War Workers Tops For Detailed Operations

Fidelity to detail is a characteristic of American women which is making them more important every day to the nation's industrial war front, says Dr. F. Theodore Struck, director of industrial education at the Pennsylvania State college.

Dr. Struck, who has made a study of vocational training for war production, believes that this quality in women is spurring the efforts of American industry where women can replace men in war plants.

"Women are being absorbed by industry more rapidly now than at a comparative period in the first World war and on the whole, this rapid induction reflects a deep and abiding concern for the welfare of the country," he said.

Millions of women, according to the college expert, are presently engaged in highly important war work, such as making munitions, loading bags of powder, assembling radios for aircraft, making and repairing gas masks, and inspecting manufactured parts and products.

Invaluable to the war effort because of their health, stamina, courage, and devotion, women are especially essential in checking minute parts. They are sometimes better fitted than men in concentrating on highly detailed and repetitious work, according to Dr. Struck.

As inspectors in plants, checking intricate parts of machinery and instruments up to two-millionths of an inch, women have proved their ability, Dr. Struck pointed out. He added that "their desire to take responsibility and do their part" is strengthening Uncle Sam's supply lines.

Having Correct Shoes Will Prevent Distress

Maybe the fellow with a bad temper is that way because his feet hurt. At any rate, it pays to study your feet—how to use them and how to care for them. Ills of the feet may be caused by wearing shoes which do not fit.

Shoes should be selected with the utmost care. Be sure you get the pair which fits comfortably and answers your needs. Try on the shoes and walk around in them to see whether they slide here or pinch or rub there. Don't buy by size alone. Your feet may require different sizes for different types. The shoes should conform to the natural shape of the foot. They should have a straight inner line, following the outline of the normal foot.

Be sure that your toes don't touch the end of the shoe and that there is no pressure on top. The great joint should come where the sole shape has the most pronounced curve. Test this by raising the heel to see whether the bend of the sole comes directly under the big joint of the big toe. The seam should not come over the great toe joint.

The shoe should fit snugly about the heel without binding, or slipping up and down or forward and back. That way lie blisters and holes in your stockings. Another point—the heel should be low and broad enough for a good support. Nature intended that man should walk on both the heel and ball of the foot.

Big Grid Games Ahead As College Teams Open Last Month of Season

Conference Titles More Settled After Week's Upsets; Irish Play Army Saturday

New York, Nov. 2 (AP) — With virtually all the conference pictures more clearly defined after last week's slam-bang program, the nation's football teams moved into the final month of the campaign today, many of them with stiff assignments dead ahead.

Although the coming week-end can't hope to produce anything as exciting as the past one, when such teams as Ohio State, Alabama, Army, Syracuse, Texas Christian and Detroit were bounced out of the undefeated ranks, there still will be enough action to go around.

Wisconsin In Front

In the western conference, Wisconsin stands alone at the front of the title chase after dumping Ohio State, 17-7, and the Badgers can protect that lead by taking their next three games, the first of them with Iowa next Saturday. Iowa's 13-6 triumph over Purdue was its second in three conference starts.

Ohio State, dropped to second place, has a non-conference date with Pitt this week and Purdue also steps out of the loop to play the Great Lakes Sailors, who blanked Missouri, 17-0.

After handing Illinois its first conference setback, 28-14, Michigan takes on Harvard in an intersectional duel. Illinois tangles with Northwestern and Minnesota, 19-7 conqueror of Northwestern, meets Indiana in conference play.

Army's 19-0 loss to Pennsylvania took a little of the edge off this week's tussle between the cadets and Notre Dame at New York's Yankee Stadium, but the Irish prepared for the classic by sinking Navy, 9-0. Penn and Navy get together at Philadelphia at the same time.

Boston College, which remained unbeaten and untied by swamping Georgetown, 47-0, catches Temple, while other eastern headliners send Yale against Cornell, Princeton against Dartmouth and Penn State against Syracuse. Fordham has an intersectional date with Louisiana State.

Georgia, which looms as the best in the south if not in the entire country after stopping previously unbeaten Alabama, 21-10, meets another but weaker southeastern conference opponent, Florida.

Alabama tangles with South Carolina and Maryland, 13-0 winner over Florida, meets Duke in a southern loop headliner. Georgia Tech, still unbeaten and untied after stopping Duke, 26-7, takes on Kentucky with visions of another southeastern conference triumph.

Tulane finally won two games in a row by tripping Vanderbilt, 28-21, and will try to make it three against Mississippi State, a southeastern foe. Mississippi plays Vanderbilt and Auburn tackles the Georgia Pre-flight Club.

With Texas Christian out of the way, Baylor and Texas collide headon with the southwest conference lead and perhaps the title at stake. Baylor knocked T.C.U. out of the unbeaten ranks, 10-7, while Texas handled southern Methodist, 21-7.

South-West Games

S.M.U. meets Texas A. and M., which crushed Arkansas, 41-0, and Arkansas tangles with Rice, 19-7 victor over Texas Tech, in other conference frays. T.C.U. and Texas Tech have a non-conference date.

In the Pacific coast conference, first-place U.S.L.A. meets Oregon in quest of league victory number four. U.C.L.A. trounced Stanford, 20-7 Sathurday while Oregon lost to California, 20-0. California plays southern California, which rested Saturday.

Stanford moves in against Washington, 13-0 conqueror of Oregon State, which meets Montana. Washington State plays Michigan State in an intersectional duel.

Nebraska and Missouri, still unbeaten in big six play, will go a long way toward deciding the conference title when they collide Saturday. Oklahoma plays Kansas State in another loop tilt.

Tulsa, unbeaten, untied and unscored on, meets Oklahoma A. and M. with the Missouri valley championship at stake.

• BOWLING NEWS •

Mixed Canine League

Johnny Ferraro's sensational bowling of late continued at the Central Recreation alleys Sunday night in the Mixed Canine League when he sparked his unstoppable Bull Dogs to three more wins. This time the unfortunate opponent happened to be the Great Danes.

Ferraro, who posted some spectacular scores this past week in the Central Major League, and who has been doing more great kegling in the Sunday night loop, anchored away last night with a 654 triple on marks of 235, 233 and 186. Another 700 series might have been in the offing had the third game been a little higher. However, there are plenty of bowlers who will settle for any of Johnny's scores.

Ferraro was the entire show against the Great Danes. F. Cirone had a 447 series while Rose Schatzel hit 441. Neither one of these two bowlers hit their usual strides last night. Slover had a 495 for the Danes.

George Caster of the Greyhounds wacked that team into higher brackets last night as he blasted out a 217 single and 623 triple. His other scores were 203 and 203. Ray Otto had 521. Joe Marks had a 455 string.

Petersen Rolls 256

The Terriers remained in fourth place as they took two games from the Police Dogs, last place team. It was young Larry Petersen, Jr., who did the trick, however, with his sizzling 256 single and 613 triple. Larry also rolled 169 and 188. Evelyn Provenzano had a 512 series. Bill Evans' 158, 255 and 140 moulded into a 553 triple.

The final match found the Whippets, second place team, capturing two games from the Spaniels, third place club. Lacey Burger's 187 single and 520 triple paced the winners. Van Alstyne had 182 and 479 for the losers.

The standing to date:

"Toby, the dog postman," is gone, and grieving postal employes at Toowong, Australia, have erected a concrete slab in memory of his 10 years of service. For a decade he arrived at the post office at 7:30 a. m. daily to accompany a postman on a round. Nor would he pay attention to anyone without a postman's whistle.

Wedding bells are ringing for all ages in Johannesburg, South Africa, it was revealed in a study of marriage ban displays which showed a girl of 14 among those planning to wed. Of 27 notices, 15 were for prospective brides under 21 years of age but the list also included two widowers, aged 68 and 67, who disclosed plans to marry widows.

Veteran baseball men refer to Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sox as the "hitless wonders." After due restraint and some very conclusive hopes, there's no other title to the present High School football machine except the "scoreless wonders."

Saturday afternoon the Maroons did it again. This time Johnny Bateman's Middletown club walloped Kingston by 39 to 0, the second 39 to 0 pasting the locals have suffered this year. Kingston was in the ball game one period, the first, when it held the Middies scoreless.

Hopes Glimmer, Fade

Kingston, which has now gone through four straight ball games without a score, started the season off with 24 points. That two dozen of markers remain as the lone offensive thrusts the Maroons have mustered together all year. Game after game critics and followers alike hoped for a score. After last week's inspiring first half showing against Poughkeepsie, fans thought that the team might do a little better against Middletown Saturday. However, it all crumbled and once again, for the fourth time this year, the onceproud Kingston High School sauntered off the gridiron with another inglorious defeat on their already unbelievably poor record for the 1942 campaign.

Newburgh Upsets Port

While the Middies were blasting the Maroons around Wilson Field in Middletown Saturday afternoon, Bill Elder's Newburgh Free Academy eleven scored the biggest upset of the DUSO League season by defeating Port Jervis 7 to 0 and thereby giving the Port club a stunning blow for its league hopes. Before this game Port was undefeated, untied and unscored upon. Coupled with the Kingston win and Port's defeat, Middletown is now assured of no worse than a tie for the 1942 championship.

After holding the powerful Middies scoreless in the first period of play, Kingston's defense crumbled under the fierce attacks offered by Bateman's gridders. In the second period Middletown started to move. Johnny Newman went over on a short plunge for the first score.

Later in the same session Bob Diaz heaved passes to Burton for two more touchdowns. Burton caught one of the aerials on the one-yard line and stepped over while the other was a pass for about 30 yards to Burton who grabbed it in the end zone.

Middie Drives in Third

Again in the third session Middletown had its ground gainers and passing attacks hitting on all fours and quickly resumed its scoring activities for the day. Two sustained drives of 65 yards and 50 yards wound up in two more touchdowns. Bill Vernooy plunged over the chalklines for the first score from the two-foot line. Following up the 50-yard drive Diaz galloped over from the three. After running wild in the second and third periods, Middletown took it easy in the final session. Only one score was registered when Newman dashed over from Kingston's four to make it 30 to 0. It was his second T. D. of the afternoon.

While the Middies repeatedly tore into Kingston's stubborn but inefficient defenses, the Maroons also were helpless in doing any gaining. For the better part of the game the play was all in Kingston's territory. The Maroons played the game without Will Harrell, quarterback. Ted Conwicke's plan to use Lee Boice in the line fizzled when Harrell was unable to play.

Burton, big Middletown end, was the potent star of the game with his pass-catching activities all afternoon. He and Diaz offered the most consistent drives against Kingston. Jiggs McLauchlin and Bobby Clark played well for the Maroons.

The starting lineups:

Isbell's Great Arm Helps Shatter Old Pro Grid Marks

Green Bay Artist Throws Five T.D. Passes as Packers Rout Cards by 55-24 Score

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP)—The magic wand of football, Cecil Isbell's arm, has become the most overworked weapon in the National Football League, throwing the Green Bay Packers to victory and the record books out the window.

Isbell shook five touchdown passes from his sleeve yesterday as the Packers crushed the Chicago Cardinals 55 to 24. Beaten only by the Bears, the Green Bay eleven is gathering momentum for its second, and showdown meeting with the national champions November 15 in Chicago.

Five records were set and two others equaled in the Packer-Cardinal game:

1. Isbell completed 10 to 21 passes for 333 yards, surpassing Davey O'Brien's gain of 316 in 1940.
2. Green. Bay picked up 427 yards through the air, topping the Chicago Bears' mark of 376 last year—made also against the Cardinals.
3. The scoring total, 55-24—79, was the highest in National Football League history.
4. Don Hutson placekicked six extra points, breaking the old record of five in a single game held by three different players.
5. The game's 11 touchdowns eclipsed the 1934 mark of 10 made in the Philadelphia-Cincinnati game.
6. Isbell's five touchdown pitches equaled the record held by Ray Buivid of the Bears since 1937. Buivid's scoring shots also were against the Cards.
7. Hutson's three catches of touchdown passes raised his season's ante to 10, which drew him even with his 1941 league record—and he has five games yet to go.

Nature, Too, Is Great Enemy of the Rising Sun

Will Nature follow in Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's wake with a volcanic raid, an earthquake attack, or a tidal-wave invasion of Japan?

Scientific bodies in Washington are receiving inquiries as to such a possibility. Some imaginative laymen have even suggested ways that the United Nations might "scientifically" promote such natural hazards in Nippon. Others ask advice about the odds they should wager on another earthquake or volcanic eruption in Japan within the next year.

Of course, seismologists say, none of these natural upheavals can be promoted by man; the belief that they can is in a class with the superstition that heavy gunfire brings rain. Volcanic eruptions, however, can be predicted by their symptoms, and study of the relationship between volcanoes and earthquakes may eventually indicate early warning signs of 'quake disasters.

A dramatic example of successful prediction occurred in 1914 in connection with the outburst of Sakurajima volcano, off the Japanese island of Kyushu. Scientists long had expected trouble in the vicinity, and as the time of the cataclysm approached, stronger and more frequent earth tremors, accompanied by volcanic rumblings, added their warning signals. When the big eruption came, no lives were lost, the island's more than 20,000 inhabitants having fled to the mainland only the day before.

Although their immediate origin is no Shangri-La mystery and certain cycles of possible recurrence may be worked out, neither earthquakes nor volcanic disturbances run on schedule. Moreover, scientists still offer various theories as to the ultimate factors deep within the earth which cause the surface dislocations.

Part of Fighting Equipment

Sugar is far more easily digested than starch. The average starchy foods take three or four hours for digestion, but the human body begins to utilize sugar from ten minutes to half an hour after it has been eaten. For this reason, sugar is an indispensable part of a fighting man's equipment. Candy bars with a high sugar content are a part of the field rations of the United States army. In 1942, according to estimates of the Office of Price Administration, beet sugar, grown and processed in 19 western and middle western states, will for the first time be the largest single source of supply for the American consumer.

Haight's I.Q. Is Given as 119 by Psychiatric Tests

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP)—Edward Haight, 17-year-old on trial for the murder of two sisters, Margaret, 7, and Helen Lynch, 8, has an intelligence quotient of 119 and records showed that he "made a satisfactory social adjustment throughout his years at school," a psychiatrist testified today.

Defense Counsel Charles J. Wallace, who said Haight would not take the stand in his own defense, listed Dr. James Gaetaniello, assistant physician of the Harlem Valley State Hospital, Wingdale, N. Y., as the sole defense witness.

Dr. Gaetaniello testified that he had first examined Haight on October 19, and four times subsequently while the youth was in Westchester county jail.

The psychiatrist reviewed Haight's living conditions in a two-room shack on the outskirts of Stamford, Conn., which he shared with his father, Arnold, a former convict, and a brother.

Haight was born in Mt. Kisco, N. Y., near the scene of the girls' slaying, the doctor said. School records showed that the youth was promoted every year from the first to the tenth grade, that he had a grade average of "B" or better and that his physical development was normal, the witness said.

"His school record indicates that Edward made a satisfactory adjustment throughout the years at schools," the psychiatrist declared. "He was liked by his teachers and accepted by fellow classmates."

Dr. Gaetaniello added that in February, 1940, when Haight was 15, he was examined by the child guidance clinic of Stamford, which recorded his physical development equivalent to 14 and a half years, his mental age as 16 and his I. Q. as 119, a superior classification.

The psychiatrist said Haight said his ambition was to be an aviator, but he was unable to pass the vision test.

Haight described himself, the witness said, as "very impulsive and quick to action. Once in a while I blow up. I repulse everyone and anyone. I'd take a poke at anyone."

The psychiatrist added that Haight seemed to enjoy every minute of the examinations and of the events connected with his trial.

When he first talked with the youth, the psychiatrist said, Haight "greeted with a friendly smile" the suggestion that he was facing the electric chair.

Haight gave "not the slightest indication of fear and not any sign of sorrow or remorse," the witness testified, adding that the youth's pulse was not accelerated.

The doctor said he had asked Haight whether he had used his hunting knife on the girls.

"No. I don't think I did," the psychiatrist said Haight replied.

The broken bodies of the two little sisters were found in a stream and a reservoir near their Bedford village home September 14, following their disappearance the night before. Haight directed police in the recovery of the second body.

FIREPLACES

The glow of June . . . when days are long
May well invite the dreamer's song . . .
A song that Summer always brings
When life is rich with fragrant things

The chill of Autumn rushes in
And nights devoid of cheer, begin
But Summer's glow makes rendezvous -
Where logs are burned in rainbow hue.
A fireplace sings a gypsy tune
Recalling dreams we shared in June
And flames that dance . . . build castles tall
Within the easy reach of all.

Each fading ember weaves a spell
And paints a scene where memories dwell
Designing pictures new and old
Our fascinated eyes behold.
Instead of seeking words that rhyme
I sit and idly pass the time
And as I gaze . . . I'm fancy-free
In dreams . . . the fireplace . . . offers me.

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—The more encouraging war news, especially from the Solomons, helped today's stock market in the continuance of the forward swing.

The list started the new week and month with fractional advances predominating. Steels then stepped out in front and, near the fourth hour, plus marks of as much as a point or so were well distributed. Volume was aided by sizable blocks of low-priced issues.

Selected carrier bonds again tiled upward. Commodities were relatively steady.

Among stocks getting into new high ground for the year were Canadian Pacific, Crucible Steel, Consolidated Edison, Graham-Paige and Northern Pacific. Supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Santa Fe, International Harvester, United Aircraft, Standard Oil (N. J.) American Can, Westinghouse, Youngstown Sheet and Republic Steel.

DESTROYER O'BRIEN TORPEDOED AS WASP BURNS

rine and army force on Guadalcanal had failed.

Bearing directly on the navy's qualified success in the Solomons were the blows being struck there by bombers of the MacArthur command from bases in that separate command zone in the southwest Pacific.

Allied airmen under General MacArthur believed they sank or seriously damaged seven enemy vessels yesterday in a pre-dawn assault on Japanese naval concentrations in the Buin-Faisi area, some 300 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

Thirty-three tons of bombs were dropped—the greatest recorded weight of bombs ever dropped in a single operation by these airmen. Two coordinated attacks were delivered by heavy and medium bomber units, at low altitude and in the face of fierce ground fire.

"Accurate observation of the results was difficult," said the communique, "but seven vessels were believed to have been sunk or seriously damaged, one of our planes failed to return."

It was the fourth consecutive pre-dawn attack on the enemy in the Buin-Faisi region.

If the attacks recorded since Thursday were delivered against separate vessels, at least 21 Japanese cargo and fighting ships have been bombed by the MacArthur men in that time, including a heavy cruiser blown up.

The likelihood, however, is that some of the ships were hit more than once in the successive raids.

Mastery Is Challenged

The Japanese meanwhile, had challenged the Allies' mastery of the air over New Guinea. Twenty Zero fighters tackled a strong formation of bombers, escorted by fighters, which crossed New Guinea to attack Lae, north shore Japanese base. Three of the Japanese were shot down. The bombers dropped 10 tons of bombs at Lae.

Three Japanese bombers raided Port Moresby, the Allies' New Guinea base, but there was no damage.

On the mountainous interior front of New Guinea Allied ground forces continued to advance, now being well beyond Isurava and Abuari, within six miles of Kokoda.

Concurrently with the growth of the German threat to breach the Caucasus mountain wall where Russia defends not only her own oil riches but also a vital approach to the Middle East, Turkey has voiced her fear of attack.

The strong Allied showing in Africa—marked today by a report from the Egyptian battlefront that a chunk of the Axis army had been cut off along the Mediterranean—no doubt added to Turkey's inclination to speak her mind.

Unofficial reports said that several thousand men of the Axis African Corps, mostly Germans, were caught when Australian troops made a bayonet charge across the coastal sand dunes, closing the trap.

In the eventuality of a German breakthrough in the Caucasus or a sharp reversal of the British Eighth Army's offensive in Egypt Turkey would have Axis armies not only at her European front door but also at her back door in the Asia Minor part of the Middle East.

Turkey, a land bridge between continents, would be cut off.

Undoubtedly with these things in mind, although he did not mention them or even name Germany, President Ismet Inonu told the Turkish Parliament yesterday that the nation is in danger of attack—"Turkey is closer to war today than at any time since the present conflict started."

Referring implicitly to the Axis, Inonu said:

"With the war spread over every quarter of the globe, one begins to understand that political institutions founded on domination by a single power cannot be maintained."

Inonu pledged Turkey to fulfillment of her alliances which include a treaty with Britain and an amity pact with Germany. In addition, Russia, in 1941, pledged aid to Turkey if Germany attacked her.

Turkey was indeed in the middle, between the European and African fronts.

Reds Fight for Routes

To the northeast, where snow was piled high on the plateaus and in the passes of the Caucasus range, the Red Army was engaged in a struggle to keep the Germans away from military routes debouching at Tiflis and Kutaisi.

To the south of Turkey, across the eastern end of the Mediterranean, the British Eighth Army's offensive on the northern flank of Marshal Rommel's African Corps had achieved a breakthrough of which Rommel himself would have been proud.

Not only were some of his troops caught between the coastal railway and the sea but his whole left, or northern, flank was endangered. The British success was reported thus in the Cairo communique:

"During the night of October 31-November 1 the enemy attempted to attack our troops established west of his position between the railway and the coast. Our infantry held their ground, but some enemy tanks succeeded in joining his infantry in their isolated position."

Behind and over the desert fighting zone and at the Axis island base of Crete the Allied aerial offensive continued without let-up. Two enemy cargo ships were bombed and sunk yesterday when torpedo planes surprised them entering harbor at Tobruk, Libya, after a Mediterranean voyage.

With the Germans stopped at Stalingrad—actually thrown back in some sectors of that wrecked Volga city—the real battle of Russia seemed to have shifted to the mountainous theatre of the deep Caucasus.

The Russians reported fighting only defensive engagements there after a retreat yesterday on the Nalchik plain.

The Germans claimed capture of Alagir, about 25 miles northwest of Ordzhonikidze, head of one military highway winding through the snowbound Caucasian peaks. The Germans also reported further progress in their drive toward Tuapse, provisional base of the Russian Black Sea fleet.

The air war in western Europe was in the doldrums, following Saturday's heavy German attack on Canterbury, but the British admiralty reported a small German supply ship set afire and another left sinking after a naval attack by a British patrol yesterday morning.

A German convoy of three small supply ships, escorted by two torpedoboats and an armed trawler, was intercepted off the Brittany coast.

Homemakers' Directions On the Care of Stoves

While homemakers may look ahead to some of the glass, plastics or ceramics stoves now being forecast for the future, for the time being it's a case of making the present kitchen range do.

Permitting the element on the electric stove to become too hot by remaining at a high temperature for a long period of time is pointed out as harmful to the mechanism and wasteful of electricity. The finest metal has been used in the heating units, and should the element happen to burn out through careless handling, chances are it could not be readily replaced.

If a homemaker is unfortunate enough to have food boil over onto her electric stove, the remedy is to let the food burn dry and then brush it off.

Water should never be used on the element. However, daily cleaning of the enamel surface of the stove with soft paper or a damp cloth is recommended. One reason for regular cleaning of the oven is that spilled food is a non-conductor of electricity and therefore more current is required to heat the oven.

In regard to the use of the kerosene stove, there is no danger in using all the burners at one time but the stove should be in good condition with the burners trimmed and well regulated. If homemakers would follow the directions suggested for their particular type of stove, whether electric, gas or kerosene, there would be a more efficient performance.

When electric power was recently rationed in Haiti it decreased the ice made by home refrigerators, causing an extra demand on commercial ice producers, who in turn had to reduce production because of less electricity, and the situation became so bad the ice producers quit.

Coal from Argentina is being used in Uruguay as raw fuel for the generation of electricity and the manufacture of fuel alcohol.

Telephone System Helps Workers on Big Planes

BUFFALO, N. Y. — Employees working on the final assembly of the new Curtiss-Commando, largest twin-engine military cargo plane in the world, have a two-way telephone system to aid them in their work.

The plan was devised when it was found that due to the Commando's tremendous size and the din of nearby shop and flight test sounds at the Curtiss-Wright corporation plant, shouted orders from one section of the plane to another were unintelligible.

The phone system proved the answer to the handicap, enabling crews to relay messages back and forth between cockpit and tail and cockpit and wings or landing gear.

The electrical impulses for the telephone lines are generated by three small dry cell batteries in a small metal box that can be carried in a jacket pocket.

A permanent telephone plug-in jack built into the Commando's fuselage enables refueling service men to connect a portable phone for conversation with the plane's cabin.

He Didn't Even Work Up A Sweat! What a Man!

FORT DEVENS, MASS.—Private Louis Longval really can take it.

His outfit's program one day included a 14-mile hike, running a tough obstacle course, hand-grenade throwing, bayonet practice, a bit of jujitsu and a swim.

At the end of the day no one asked for a pass—except Longval.

His mates were curious the next morning and Private Longval explained:

He had walked six miles to a nearby town, danced all evening and hiked back to camp.

The Chicago Fire

The great Chicago fire burned for two days and nights, October 9 to 11, 1871. The flames started in a barn owned by Patrick O'Leary at 137 DeKoven street, either from spontaneous combustion in the haymow or to the carelessness of persons smoking in the barn.

The fire burned over 2,100 acres, destroying 17,500 buildings and causing 250 deaths. It destroyed almost a third of the city's property—nearly $200,000,000. Nearly a quarter of the inhabitants were rendered temporarily homeless—70,000 in a population of 324,000.

Democratic Party

The Democratic party claims origin from the earliest years of this republic, Thomas Jefferson being its first leader and spokesman. By 1792 the term Democratic-Republican party was being used to designate the Anti-Federalists or those who believed that the government was becoming too centralized. After the first ten amendments to the Constitution, the "Bill of Rights," were added, this party ceased to oppose the Constitution. The next three Presidents, Madison, Monroe and J. Q. Adams, belonged to the party, which under Andrew Jackson in 1823 became generally known as the Democratic party.

had exercised the power granted under the first war powers act to make emergency navy purchases abroad and to enter the materials free of duty.

"This has measurably assisted our war effort," he said, "but it only partially eliminates the obstacles prescribed by law which I have already mentioned."

"I, therefore, recommend early enactment by the Congress of legislation to the extent required for the effective prosecution of the war, the free movement of persons, property and information into and out of the United States," the President said, adding:

"I do not now recommend that Congress repeal or amend any of these peace time restrictive laws.

"It is my judgment that the problem can best be dealt with by giving to the President for the duration of the war, but no longer, the power on a selective and flexible basis to suspend the operation of all or any such laws, in such a way as to meet new and perhaps unforeseen problems as they may arise, and on such terms as will enable the Chief Executive and the government agencies to work out in detail parallel action in other countries."

The President recalled that on December 23, 1941, he had approved a statement of war production policy for Canada and the United States which recommended suspension during the war of tariffs and other barriers impeding the free flow of munitions between the two countries.

Britain StepsUpProduction

Cardiff, Wales, Nov. 2 (AP)—Britain's aircraft production in September increased 20 per cent over August, Home Secretary Herbert Morrison declared here yesterday in a speech in which he paid tribute to the achievements of the British worker. Production of other war materials, exclusive of ships, showed an increase of 41 per cent in the same period, Morrison added. He asserted that Britain's per capita output of war goods of all kinds exceeded that of any nation and that the shipbuilding output alone is double that per head of any other country.

Allies to Feed, Arm U. S. Forces

Will Partially Repay Lend-Lease Aid Given to the United Nations.

WASHINGTON.—American armed forces on various fighting fronts of the world will be supplied locally with military equipment, munitions, food supplies and other facilities under the terms of a series of agreements signed here.

The agreements, concluded with the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Fighting France, provide the opportunity for at least partial repayment of the lend-lease assistance the United States has furnished for those fighting the Axis.

They specify that the war production and war resources of the Allies shall be pooled in the most effective way and that assistance shall be given American forces by their allies in the various theaters of operation to conserve shipping and increase the efficiency of the Allied war effort.

Signs for United States.

Secretary of State Hull signed the agreements for the United States. Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, signed for the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, while Sir Owen Dixon and Walter Nash, the ministers of Australia and New Zealand, signed for their governments.

The agreement with Fighting France, the former Free French organization of which Gen. Charles de Gaulle is the head, was arranged through an exchange of notes in London between Brig. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, acting U. S. military representative, and Maurice de Jean, representing the French national committee.

The agreements broaden and formalize the lend-lease agreements, making them into more effective mutual-assistance pacts. They specify that the war production and war resources of the four signatory governments and the Fighting French organization shall be used in ways that most effectively utilize available materials, manpower, production facilities and shipping space. They provide that each party to the agreements shall provide the maximum in reciprocal aid so that the need of foreign currency shall be reduced to a minimum.

Covers Wide Range.

The types of assistance which is to be given American armed forces locally were listed as follows:

(A) Military equipment, munitions and military and naval stores.

(B) Other supplies, materials, facilities and services for the U. S. forces, except for the pay and allowances of such forces, administrative expenses and such local purchases as its official establishments may make other than through the official establishments of the government of the United Kingdom (or the other parties).

(C) Supplies, materials and services needed in the construction of military projects, tasks and similar capital works required for the common war effort in the United Kingdom or in the British colonial empire (or in territories of the others), except for the wages and salaries of U. S. citizens.

(D) Supplies, materials and services needed in the construction of such military projects, tasks and capital works in territory other than the United Kingdom (or the others) to the extent that the United Kingdom (or the others) is a more practicable source of supply than the United States or another of the United Nations.

5,000,000 Chinese Forced To Aid Japanese Troops

CHUNGKING. — Invading Japanese forces have impressed approximately 5,000,000 Chinese laborers in North China during the last five years and sent them to Manchuria and Japan to relieve an acute labor shortage, Chinese quarters reported.

Now, these quarters declared, the Japanese are planning to conscript 2,000,000 more—of whom 1,500,000 are to be sent to Manchuria, 150,000 to Inner Mongolia and 100,000 to Japan, while the remaining 250,000 will be put to work in North China.

Sat as National Anthem Was Played; Gets 20 Days

TACOMA, WASH.—Edward Juntti, 35, was sentenced to 20 days in jail—so he could spend the time sitting down.

He remained sitting when "The Star Spangled Banner" was played in a tavern. Other customers stood; Juntti remained sitting. The others protested and called police.

Police Judge W. A. Richmond sentenced Juntti to jail specifically for failure to stand when the National Anthem was played.

Bees Imprison Firemen In Own Engine House

DENVER.—Firemen at the Englewood station were prisoners in their engine house 2½ hours.

Bees, thousands of them, took charge of the doors and stopped all comers until A. B. Honeywell, an amateur apiarist, coaxed them into a portable hive where they were in a more peaceful mood.

Fortunately, there were no alarms out Englewood way during the emergency.

Eight Ships Sunk In Western Ocean

(By The Associated Press)

Eight cargo carrier—four American, two British, one Norwegian and one Panamanian—last week were announced sunk by the enemy in the western Atlantic.

Seven were attacked off South America's northern coast, the biggest score achieved by U-boats in that area over a seven-day period in more than two months. The other was attacked off the United States.

At least 49 seamen died in the sinkings, which raised to 510 the Associated Press count of announced united and neutral nations merchant ship losses in Western Atlantic enemy action since Pearl Harbor. Four men were reported missing.

Unknown Donor's $5.00 Is Start of Loan Fund

A $5 banknote, left anonymously upon the doorstep of the president of the Pennsylvania State college two years ago, has increased its value almost 1,000 times.

With that banknote as a starter, Mrs. Ralph D. Hetzel, wife of the president of the college, established a loan fund which is available to students when they need it in an emergency.

Total loans of $4,981 have been made to students. With $10 named as the highest loan, students borrow money from this fund to meet emergency needs for food and room rent, special visits home, job interviews and medical expenses.

No interest is charged and no time is specified for the payment of such a loan. The only requisite is that a student must need the money to tide him over an emergency. Up to and including August 31, 338 students have borrowed 524 times from the fund.

Nearly two-fifths of the loans were made to men and women who needed money for food and living expenses. Graduation expenses, books and shoes, eye glasses, clothes, and personal reasons were other necessities which brought the student to the emergency loan fund.

Donations, many of them from alumni, faculty, and undergraduates, have increased the fund to its present status of $2,367.

Inonu Declaration May Be Warning

ment which Inonu apparently has in mind as a possibility. In view of the circumstances there is much significance in his statement "that political institutions founded on domination by a single power cannot be maintained."

That would seem at once to be a declaration of Turkish policy and a prediction that the Axis cannot win the war.

Platinum Ring Is Out

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP)—Fashionable or not, the platinum wedding ring is about out. The war production board today prohibited the use of platinum in making jewelry. Platinum articles already manufactured, however, may be sold. Platinum is needed for a number of war purposes, such as the manufacture of nitric acid and radio tubes.

Off-Year Balloting May Total 30 Millions

was reached in 1937 when it was 333 to 89.

The present line-up in the House is 257 Democrats, 165 Republicans, five other parties, and eight vacancies, fow hich seven were Democratic and one Republican.

The Democrats look for net gains in the House elections in New Hampshire, Indiana, Michigan, Montana, and California. They also are counting certain pick-ups, by reapportionment, of one seat each in Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arizona, and New Mexico, and two out of the three seats that California gains this year by population growth.

Republicans expect to make their House gains in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Massachusetts, Michigan, Maryland, Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

One hundred House candidates, mostly in the south, will be elected without opposition.

Chief interest in the governorship races centers in the pivotal states of New York, California, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Massachusetts. Republican leaders are claiming victories in all six states. The first three now have Democratic governors and the Democrats say they will continue to be Democratic next year. They do not concede the other states either.

Republicans base their principal hopes on Thomas E. Dewey to beat John J. Bennett, Jr., Democrat, in the New York race, and on Earl Warren, California's attorney general, to defeat Gov. Culbert L. Olson, Democrat.

A victory for Dewey would put him among the top eligibles for the presidential nomination in 1944, as he was in 1940, although he has promised to serve out a full four year term if elected governor. Similarly, re-elections of Governors Harold E. Stassen in Minnesota and John W. Bricker in Ohio might place them in the Republican presidential or vice presidential limelight two years hence.
